Outfall Clouds Suspected Sickness Carrier

By JOHN MATTERS
Scientists have found possibly disease-laden clouds of fecal particles hovering over Greater Victoria's offshore sewage outfalls, it was learned Friday.

The fecal material taken in samples 2,500 and 5,000 feet above the outfalls contained microbial flora. Wherever such flora are found, the strong possibility exists that disease-causing organisms also are present.

In addition to entering the body via the respiratory passages, such particles would spread over the city and countryside, falling eventually onto plants, berries and pastureland, where they are consumed by humans and animals.

Dr. Webb also measured the fecal clouds over the South Saskatchewan River, into which the city of Saskatoon dumps its sewage. He found that they were similar to those over Victoria's outfalls.

Samples from altitudes above a raw sewage outlet at Victoria revealed the same types of fecal particles as were found at Saskatoon. The fact one outlet was to salt and the other to fresh water made no difference.

The particles tend to remain in cloudlike formations above the outlets at Victoria and Saskatoon on quiet, comparatively windless days. However, even a mild air movement can carry them 10 miles or more.

Vegetables and fruit could be washed but ordinary water would be unlikely to ensure purity. The air breathed by the population of an entire city would be beyond the realm of complete sterilization.

Saskatoon for years has had a history of heavy infections in winter from what is popularly called stomach flu.

Bank Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor Louis Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada announced Friday night a cut in the bank rate to 6 per cent from 6½ per cent, effective Sept. 3.

His brief announcement said the cut was "in line with recent developments in Canada and abroad."

The bank rate is the rate of interest charged by the Bank of Canada on loans to the chartered banks. They rarely draw such advances, and then only for short periods, but the central bank stands ready to make the advances as so-called lender of last resort in the banking system.

FINANCIAL SIGN
By the bank rate it sets, the Bank of Canada gives a signal to the financial community about its view of the credit situation.

When the central bank was trying to dampen down an overheated economy last year it pushed the rate to 7 per cent in November, and to 7½ per cent in January this year.

The rate was pushed up to its peak of 7½ per cent March 15—the day the London gold market was closed in the crisis over gold.

FREE PRICE

A free market price for gold was then established by international bankers, letting it ride higher than the $35 an ounce U.S. price still used for international monetary purposes.

The Bank of Canada reduced the bank rate to 7 per cent July 2 after more ease was permitted in the money markets and short-term interest rates began to fall. It was cut further to 6½ per cent on July 29.

Pravda Urges 'Liquidation' Of 40,000

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda today called for "liquidation" of 40,000 counter-revolutionaries in Czechoslovakia.

As quoted by Tass, the organ of the Communist party said the struggle in Czechoslovakia is far from over.

"Having failed in the capital and industrial centres, the reactionaries go to the provinces," the newspaper said in an article from S. Borzenko, its Prague correspondent.

"Counter-revolution is manoeuvring. Whatever is honest in the Czechoslovak people calls for the liquidation, in the first turn, of counter-revolutionary gangs which number over 40,000 members."

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo Republic (UPI) — Army troops Friday battled rebel forces in an area south of Brazzaville, apparently trying to protect two deposed ministers, and the government declared a state of siege in Brazzaville.

Czech List Of 2,000 Told 'Go'

From Reuters, AP, UPI

PRAGUE—Premier Oldrich Cernik of Czechoslovakia has warned that the Soviet Union has drawn up a list of more than 2,000 Czechoslovak intellectuals who may be arrested.

His warning, which leaked out Friday, came as evidence mounted that Soviet patience with the stubborn non-cooperation of the Czechoslovaks is running short.

Moscow signalled a housecleaning of key liberals with a press attack calling for the ouster in Prague of "bankrupt politicians" and "those who have succumbed to nationalistic sentiments."

Price of Withdrawal

Communist sources in Prague said Soviet occupation authorities demanded the re-instatement of pro-Moscow hardliners as the price of first troop withdrawals.

In Vienna, the state-operated radio station reported that Czech interior minister Josef Pavel, who's department runs the police, has resigned.

The Soviet press lambasted Deputy Premier Ota Sik, father of the Czechoslovak economic reform. Sik was vacationing in Yugoslavia at the time of the invasion and so far has not returned. Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek, also is believed to be in either Vienna or Belgrade, stalling off his return to Czechoslovakia from the United Nations.

In other developments:
● Reuters news agency reported it had been authoritatively learned that the Czechoslovak Communist party central committee — the country's supreme policy-making body — would meet today to elect a new ruling presidium.

The country's communist leaders were reported preparing to debate, at a party congress, the accord reached in Moscow negotiations, which provided for gradual withdrawal of Soviet bloc troops from Czechoslovakia as the situation "normalizes."

● The Associated Press reported that Soviet tanks and occupation troops moved out of Prague Friday, but Soviet security agents moved behind the scenes to tighten Moscow's grip on the country.

Reuters reported however, that the Soviets were ignoring Czechoslovak demands to withdraw from key points of the city where their presence was preventing a return to normal life. Cernik's government was reported virtually powerless

Tension Rising Again

From Wire Reports

BUCHAREST — Tension in Romania, which decreased after the announcement of the Moscow agreement with Czechoslovakia, has started to mount again with reports of Russian and Bulgarian troops concentrating along Romania's eastern and southern border.

Many well informed Romanians say the weekend could be critical, and Bucharest has an atmosphere of crisis, the London Daily Telegraph reports.

Travellers returning from the Soviet Ukraine reported long columns of armor and artillery near the Pruth River, which forms the Rumanian-Soviet border in the east.

DANUBE PORT
Bulgarian troops were said to be moving into the area of Russe, opposite the Romanian Danube River port of Giurgiu, where a huge bridge connects the two countries.

People arriving at the Romanian border crossing point of Albita reported a concentration of Russian tanks, personnel carriers and guns near the Ukrainian town of Kotovskoye. Roads to the border were clogged with troops heading west, one traveller said.

IN DIVISIONS
Estimates of Russian troops strength in the area range from 15 to 27 divisions of armor and motorized infantry.

The cost to the federal government last winter was about $25,000,000, down from the peak of $40,900,000 in 1965-66.

● Formation of a five-man committee to study and report, by March 1 at the latest, on government information services at home and abroad. The committee would make recommendations "to promote greater efficiency in the diffusion of official information."

'Let No One Unleash Dogs of War'

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) —President Johnson said Friday night there are rumors the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia might be repeated elsewhere in Eastern Europe and asserted "let no one unleash the dogs of war."

Johnson warned any would-be aggressor not to misjudge the United States and said that there will be no appeasement of those who prowl across national boundaries "in this or any other administration." The rumors centred on Romania and came through official channels rather than from news reports from overseas.

Outfall Clouds Carriers?

Opponents of the proposal fear the bacteria and viruses would wash back to the beaches, killing marine life or even contaminating waters on the American side of Juan de Fuca Strait.

Among those who rejected the idea on the basis of present data — before the Webb studies — was Ralph Lottmark.

Saskatoon now is considering a sewage treatment plant but since Dr. Webb's report fears have arisen that such an installation would also produce a pathogen-laden aerosol.

The scientist, who holds three earned PhDs, suggested studies be started at once to determine how far such a plant should be located from population centres, the type of plant needed and what contribution other waste materials, such as the effluent from animal feed lots, could be making to the atmospheric contamination.

The conventional sewage disposal plant usually involves some form of stirring, bubbling and settling.

Prof. Webb said the recent research indicated bubbling would release more aerosols rather than minimize the danger of bacterial and viral aerial particles.

No one really knows how many diseases may be spread by microbial particles and viruses in the air but some are already well recognized. A few of these are tuberculosis, hepatitis, gastro-enteritis and polio.

One of the unknowns is the role of sewage aerosol in the transmission of infectious hepatitis, a disease for which

Victoria has become notorious in recent years. In air samples taken over Victoria's sewer outfalls, Dr. Webb is believed to have identified a bacteria that normally inhabits the lower bowel of the human.

One of the unknowns is the role of sewage aerosol in the transmission of infectious hepatitis, a disease for which

It could be coincidental, but 45 per cent of the people who came down with hepatitis in the last six months of 1967 lived near the Gorge or Portage Inlet. They are among several sites in Greater Victoria which this spring were posted with no-swimming signs.

If the hepatitis virus can be carried in an aerosol, it is possible the victims contracted the disease when it was swept landward on breezes.

The heat exchange between the land and the sea, the process which causes the gentle breezes familiar to this area, vary with the temperature.

As the temperatures increase, so do the frequency and velocity of the winds, either landward or seaward.

It is generally held that the summer of 1967 was considerably warmer than this summer in Victoria.

An interesting problem is presented when one considers the fact that the number of infectious hepatitis cases in the Greater Victoria area is down about 40 per cent from last year.

(There were 71 cases reported to the end of August compared with 115 during the same period of 1967.)

However, there is no scientific proof to support those observations. If the hepatitis virus is carried in an aerosol, does it retain sufficient potency to attack a human? Is typical of the questions which still have to be examined.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that British Columbia, with a marine environment into which is discharged huge volumes of human wastes, last year had an 85 per cent increase in infectious hepatitis compared to 1967.

At the same time, the number of cases increased 23 per cent in Canada as a whole.

Second Nonsuch Sails in U.K.

APPLEDORE, England (Reuters) — The historic launching of the Nonsuch, the 46-ton sailing ship which sailed from England to Hudson's Bay in 1668, has been recreated at this Devon fishing village. Thousands packed the town to see the launch, which led to the formation of the Hudson's Bay Co. slide down the slipway. Built by the company, she will go on show in Britain until 1970, then sail the original route back to Canada.

to interfere in Czechoslovakia's internal affairs.

Sources said a government representative has discussed with leading journalists the way the Czechoslovak press should operate under stricter press control in the future.

They said the journalists' representatives said they fully understood the need for press curbs at times of national emergency, and would not attack the government because of the restrictions.

A return to press censorship was one of the points agreed upon in Moscow.

Cernik, at a confidential briefing for selected Czechoslovak journalists believed to have taken place in Prague Thursday, said the Soviet list of names is growing longer all the time.

Journalists who were at the briefing said later the premier left them with the impression that anyone who had been active in the six months of democratization under First Secretary Alexander Dubcek of the Czechoslovak Communist party would be well advised to get out of the country.

Cernik was quoted as saying: "Go away from the brains of the country to get out while they can."

"I am not safe, so how can I save anyone else?"

When asked about the personal safety of government and party members, he replied: "No one now can guarantee this. I am not sure of my own safety."

Dubcek has spent several days in trying to persuade his progressive supporters to how to the will of the Kremlin. Now, to give public proof of his good faith to Moscow, he has called the old party central committee

Sleeping Pill Not Dangerous When Instructions Followed

By JOSEPH MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about sleeping pills and how dangerous they are. Can they be taken every night (one a night) if you cannot sleep otherwise and if you are under a doctor's care? — Mrs. G. B.

The most precise answer I can give you is that sleeping pills are not dangerous — if you follow instructions and have good sense.

It is important to get enough sleep. Some folks, one way and another, become so keyed up that a sleeping pill is the only way to assure them of proper sleep. Some elderly people are very much helped by a suitable sleeping pill.

One danger with sleeping pills is that some patients, very often neurotic ones, keep insisting that they "can't sleep" and begin increasing the dosage the doctor set. That's the time to look out!

Or some get into trouble by taking other medications which have a similar effect. Antihistamines, tranquilizers, and some cough medicines have sedative action, so the total effect is much like increasing the dosage of sleeping pills.

Another, and probably more serious risk, is the use of alcohol. It is a depressant. Adding its effect to that of sleeping pills is like increasing the dosage and can be dangerous to the point of death.

There is reason to believe that some people get themselves so doozy, whether from sleeping pills, alcohol, other medication, or some combination of them, that they don't know how many pills they are taking. Conscious and more or less awake, but not alert, they take another pill — and another — and too many.

Therefore, I consider it a good rule never to leave a bottle at the bedside. If you normally take one pill (or two if your doctor permits) put the pill or two and a glass of water where you can reach them. But keep the rest of the pills at a safe distance, so you can't sleepily reach for an extra one.

Those are the principal dangers of sleeping medications. Use them strictly according to instructions, and you need have no fear of them.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been told that the skin contains certain vitamins and too much bathing is harmful because it destroys these vitamins. Is this true? — Mrs. E. B.

Not true. However, over-bathing can wash away some of the natural oils in the skin and thus cause dry skin and itching.

Note to B.J.A. and others: No, a hiatal hernia, unlike common hernias, does not manifest itself by any bulge or swelling, that will be detectable on the surface of the body. It is internal. The same is true of diverticulosis.

Good Appointment

A RECENT CANADIAN Press article noted that at least nine Liberals who were members of the previous Parliament or who ran for the new one have been appointed to federal government jobs. It listed Joe Macaluso, appointed to the Canadian transportation commission at an annual salary of $24,000; John Matheson, named a county court judge; Paul Tardif, who has become a citizenship court judge; James Byrne, now a member of the immigration appeal board at $19,000 a year; Roger Teillet, appointed a Canadian pension commissioner at $18,500; John B. Stewart, made an assistant to the president of the Privy Council; Jacques Tremblay, now an assistant to the revenue minister; Joseph O'Keefe, a special assistant to the labor minister, and Lloyd Axworthy, named executive assistant for housing to the transport minister.

Of the appointments, the Vancouver Sun has remarked that no doubt these people are good men of talent. But so, it says, are David Fulton, Duff Roblin, George Chatterton, Dalton Camp, Alvin Hamilton, Michael Starr, Terry Nugent, Howard Graffey and Dick Bell — "The difference is that the former are out-of-office Liberals and the latter out-of-office Conservatives."

It would have been refreshing, it would have brought more than a whiff of clean, fresh air into Canadian politics, if the government of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau had recognized the capabilities of even one of these erstwhile opponents in the Commons with an appointment to a non-political post. But it is apparently not to be.

When a New Democratic Party spokesman talks of pork barrel politics, then, one might expect him to be looking at Ottawa and not Victoria. But no, he is referring to the provincial government's announcement that Mr. Chatterton, the former Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, has been named to the civil service post of commissioner of the homeowner and home-acquisition grants program, to make a survey of programs and recommend means of increasing the supply of new housing.

To the contrary, for once at least Premier W. A. C. Bennett's "best man for the job" explanation of the appointment of an ex-politician is entirely plausible. Mr. Chatterton's experience and knowledge in the housing field extends from 16 years as Vancouver Island regional supervisor for the Veterans' Land Act, through his service as reeve of Saanich to his emergence as Conservative spokesman on housing in the House of Commons. A better man for the post would certainly be hard to find.

No Write-Off

VICE-PRESIDENT Hubert Humphrey faces the Herculean task of reuniting his own Democratic Party, rebuilding the public's confidence in it as a viable and progressive political party and persuading the electors that he is a better man than Republican candidate Richard Nixon to occupy the White House for the next four years.

With only three months to go before the presidential election date, Mr. Humphrey's position at this time is anything but an enviable one.

Not only will he have to start his campaign from something less than scratch following the Democratic Party's image-topping Chicago debacle, but he will also be saddled with policies — particularly those affecting the war in Vietnam and civil liberties at home — which differ little, if at all, from those already being mooted by Mr. Nixon and the Republican Party.

This, of course, is not to say that the presidency has as of now been handed to Mr. Nixon on a silver plate. Far from it, perhaps.

Mr. Humphrey, largely unknown even in his own country outside of his own political circles, is now for the first time in his political career his own man. No longer is he obliged to play stooge to President Johnson, no longer will he be restricted to mouthing someone else's words or espousing somebody else's policies.

With this new freedom now granted him, Mr. Humphrey may well emerge as a completely different person from what he was when he was simply the president's shadowy echo. Nor should it be forgotten that behind him stands what must be the most superbly run political machine in the world.

Despite all the difficulties and problems ahead, Vice-President Humphrey cannot yet be written off.

Bloody Culture

IN 1957 THE FEDERAL government established the Canada Council "to foster and promote the study and enjoyment of works in the arts, humanities and social sciences" and made available the sum of $100,000,000 for this purpose, half to be used for capital grants to universities and the income from the other half to be used for scholarships, studentships and bursaries to individuals and organizations.

About half the income of this government endowment fund is spent annually in making possible the performance and tours of ballets and operas, assisting individual artists and supporting festivals, symphony orchestras, theatres, art galleries, art magazines and many other enterprises.

One of its most recent grants enabled a young New York artist, Ralph Ortiz, to come to Vancouver to demonstrate his art form to Canadians this week.

An audience of about 80 people watched his performance which he calls "a response to the crucial issues of mankind's emotional and physical survival."

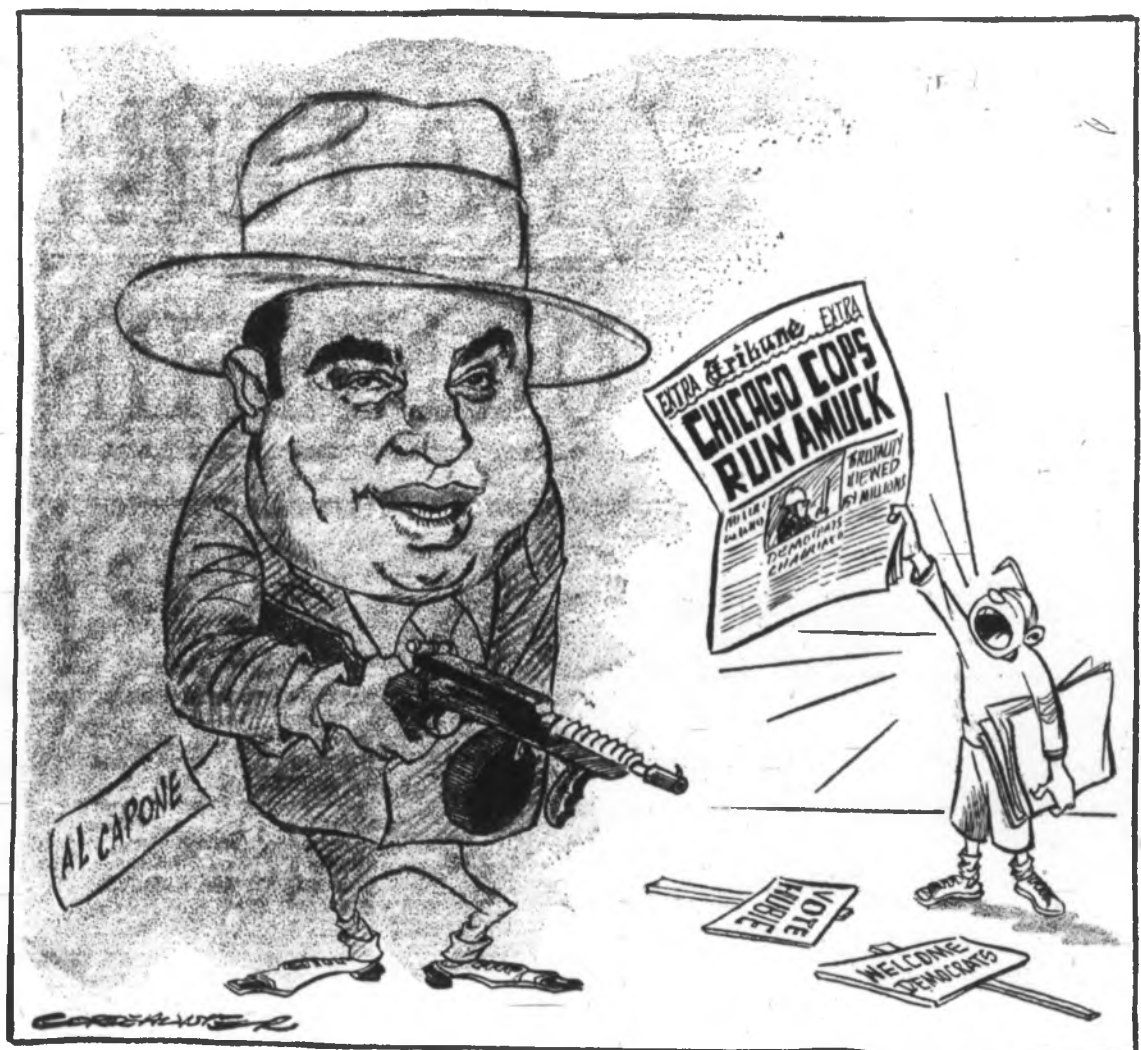

The Canadian Press describes what happened: "To open the show he grabbed his axe and pounded an old record player into splinters. Next he wielded the axe into an upright piano draped with plastic bags containing cow's blood.

"Four white mice inside the piano scurried for safety as Mr. Ortiz smashed the piano into a pile of blood-spattered wreckage. All the mice got away.

"Later in the performance he was joined by 10 young persons including four young women who threw cow's blood over themselves and proceeded to rip off each other's clothing, but not all the way.

"During this scene they shouted epithets and curses mostly directed against the Vietnam war."

At this point it may be interesting for Victoria taxpayers to recall that the Canada Council has rejected two applications for grants for the B.C. Maritime Museum, despite the fact that that organization qualified for its assistance in several categories. Obviously Canada Council officials do not consider our museum to be as culturally enlightening for Canada as Mr. Ortiz and his axe.

"Now maybe they'll forget my little St. Valentine's Day caper . . ."

Quick Control Needed

A Critical Year of the Desert Locust

By LOUIS CRONJE from London

GRAT swarms of the desert locust are building up along the shores of the Red Sea, and in a 3,000-mile belt spanning the width of Africa from Mauritania through Mali, Niger and the Sudan to Ethiopia and the Republic of Somalia. Potentially, this is the biggest build-up for 30 years, and scientists are speaking, optimistically perhaps, of a four-year cycle of devastation in Africa and the Middle East.

Invasions of this insect have always originated in the Arabian Desert and the Sahara. During the past year these areas have enjoyed a relatively high rainfall; the desert has blossomed, and brought forth great bands of locusts. Despite an integrated and efficient early warning system, and the employment of large quantities of modern insecticides, the increase in size of the swarms appears to be unchecked. Flying swarms of adults are spreading outward in all directions from the focal-breeding areas, and disquieting reports, still unconfirmed, announce their arrival many hundreds of miles further.

Even without these rumors, the present situation is very serious. If it remains static — and we have every reason to believe that this is but the beginning of a massive outbreak — the economies of the countries already invaded are in jeopardy. On the Arabian bank of the Red Sea, the infestation is already enormous, particularly in the Yemen, where a single swarm, one of many, was found to cover 60 square miles. This whole region had heavy rains in mid-July, and conditions for the locusts could hardly be more favorable. Already the adults are breeding freely and pushing northwards into Jordan.

Two months ago a migration from this area moved across the Persian Gulf and is already well established in the semi-arid region of the India-Pakistan border. A build-up of this population, unless it is controlled very soon, will threaten the whole of the Indian sub-continent, and so far only tentative attempts at control have been carried out.

On the African shores of the Red Sea large swarms of adult locusts are already moving and breeding. This is one of their summer breeding areas; but already the increasing swarms have moved far out of this zone, and have settled and begun to breed and lay eggs along the Nile, in Ethiopia and in Somalia.

The swarms in Mauritania, Mali and Niger are also in a recognized summer breeding area, but concentrations are enormous even for a locust year. This is the most striking characteristic of the locust swarms: they move. The adults are tremendously powerful fliers and voracious eaters, with a huge breeding potential. When their surroundings have been denuded of vegetation they take wing, usually in the direction of the prevailing winds, the members of the swarm staying together.

There are two distinct phases in the life-cycle of swarming locusts, so dissimilar that they appear to belong to different species. In normal years, the locust leads a solitary life, usually in the drier parts of the world. It is a large but not very conspicuous insect, and although each female lays many eggs, the wingless hoppers which hatch from them are thinned out by their natural enemies and by a scarcity of food, so that their numbers remain small and the population remains static. These solitary locusts do not migrate but spend their lives in the area where they were born.

From time to time, however, a series of changes in the environment favors the locusts: abnormal rains bring on a flush of vegetation as the small locusts hatch, so that they have ample food, and great numbers survive. These tiny wingless locusts stay together in bands, which move slowly along in search of food, and join up with other bands, all moving in the same direction. Because of the way they move they are called "hoppers," and as they feed they grow, casting their skins to accommodate their growing bodies. After five or six moults they are full-grown, and in this final stage each has four efficient wings.

These locusts are smaller than the solitary form, darker in color, very active and voraciously hungry. Within a short time their bodies have hardened and they are ready to fly. They take short practice flights until all are ready; and then as if at a signal millions of them take off together, their numbers darkening the sky. They fly, perhaps, 50 miles a day, then come to earth and feed, leaving a leafless desolation behind.

In a few weeks these restless swarms become sexually mature and begin to mate. After that the females lay eggs at every stopping-point, thrusting the tips of their abdomens deep into the moist soil to deposit pods of 50 to 100 eggs. A fortnight afterwards these eggs hatch, and new bands of hoppers emerge, grow, feed and take flight when they are full-grown.

The easiest and most efficient method of control is to kill the bands of hoppers. As they all move in the same direction it is necessary only to spray a strip of vegetation in the line of advance with a long-lasting insecticide. As they move through they eat and die, and the menace is over. Things are very seldom that easy; these hopper bands are generally in very isolated areas, and far from modern communications. News of their movements may reach the authorities weeks later, often too late to be of value. Once the insects are full-grown, control becomes much more difficult and costly. Using modern techniques, the flying swarms are sprayed with insecticides from aircraft. This has been very successfully done, but the cost is high. On average, it requires 100 gallons of spray to kill one square mile of flying locusts, and a single swarm may cover 50-100 square miles or more. The whole swarm must be killed, as even a 10 per cent survival can lay enough eggs to build up a new swarm as big as the first.

From the time it begins to fly until it begins breeding, a swarm may fly 2,000 or 3,000 miles. From our knowledge of their movements we can say with a degree of certainty that the swarms which are now on the Arabian shores of the Red Sea will move north and east this winter into Syria, Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan and Pakistan; and next spring their descendants will fly into India. The swarms on the African shores of the Red Sea will fly down the east coast to Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania. The swarms in Mauritania, Mali and Niger will fly north to spend the winter in Morocco and Algeria.

Each locust eats its own bodyweight of green vegetation each day, and a large swarm may weigh 20,000 tons. Where the mature locusts land they lay eggs, and succeeding generations may persist for four or five years. When one calculates this in terms of food for humans and livestock it presents a very terrible total of misery and starvation among people who are least able to withstand these added burdens.

Cardinal Leger's Resignation

Was There a Crisis of Conscience?

By WILLIAM C. HEINE, Editor, The London Free Press

DID Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger leave his post as spiritual leader of Quebec's five million French-speaking Catholics because he could not support the policies of Pope Paul VI?

The question must be asked in the light of strong objections from within the Roman Catholic Church to the pope's encyclical on birth control, questions within the church on other long-held tenets of faith, and Cardinal Leger's past two decades.

The extent of the division within the church over the pope's encyclical is increasingly evident. Many Catholic laymen, as well as many priests and bishops, have been outspoken in their opposition to the encyclical which denies artificial birth control methods to Catholics.

Cardinal Leger has had a liberal view on birth control and many other current issues. At a press conference in November, 1967, soon after his return from the first synod of Roman Catholic bishops, he spoke of birth control and urged a more liberal view by the church, saying marital love should be placed on an equal plane of importance with child-bearing.

Earlier, at the synod, he led an attack by church progressives against a controversial document prepared by the prelates in the Vatican's conservative curia which argued that the church was "under siege by atheism and error." In his attack, Cardinal Leger said the document made the major mistake of not differentiating between real errors of faith and trivial opinions.

His position at the synod was only one of many which must have antagonized the conservatives of the Vatican, who, as the encyclical on birth control demonstrated, have a powerful influence on church pronouncements. In 1962, returning from the first sessions of John XXIII's Ecumenical Council, Cardinal Leger said that "everything that was done was badly done." Of his own "daring" proposals, he said, "I was not listened to. I spoke in the desert."

Cardinal Leger consistently has led the reform movements which have been sweeping the Roman Catholic Church since John XXIII became pope. After John's death, there were several suggestions that Cardinal Leger might be a compromise candidate for the papacy.

One such came from the editor of a leading Jesuit magazine in United States who said Cardinal Leger was "one of the most liberal minds in the church," and that he would have strong European support. France's President Charles de Gaulle was said to be a supporter of Cardinal Leger for the papacy.

The conservative elements of the church had then, and still have today, firm control over the official pronouncements of the church and over the papal succession, and Giovanni Cardinal Montini, Archbishop of Milan, became pope. Though the Ecumenical Council continued its work and the new synod of bishops met as scheduled, the progressive mood inspired by John XXIII changed under Paul VI.

Cardinal Leger came back exhausted from the synod in Rome and a few weeks later announced he was resigning his Montreal diocese to work "as a simple priest" with lepers in Africa.

It is significant that Pope Paul accepted the resignation of

Computer Looses Hectic Revolution

By JOHN DAVY from Edinburgh

FIFTEEN '68, the monster international jamboree of the computing industry which was held here, has faithfully reflected the hectic revolution now on the loose in our civilization, even if many citizens have barely recognized it.

Organized by the International Federation for Information Processing, the congress presented a dizzy confusion of problems and prophecies, machines and men, in which computers featured as clerks, managers, directors, textile designers, town planners, literary scholars, mathematicians, physicists and composers of music.

But behind all this — alarming to some, inspiring to others — there was a sense of an industry proliferating on the verge of unmanageability, eliciting here and there almost a note of desperation.

Computing is growing by over 20 per cent per year while the cost of mechanized arithmetic has plummeted 60-fold in the past 10 years. You can now do a million or so arithmetic calculations for about 25 cents.

Besides an anticipated crisis in personnel to man computers, there is a hardware crisis and a software crisis. The hardware is the actual computing machinery and associated equipment; the software is the system of programs and instructions needed to control it.

Hardware is suffering not so much from a crisis as from galloping evolution. The sheer speed and capacity of computers is exploding — it seems only a few months ago that Britain's Atlas computers had a respectable claim to be the world's most powerful. But machines 16 times more powerful are now on commercial order in the United States.

The bits and pieces these machines are made of are changing rapidly. Only 15 years ago computers were still built of radio tubes. These are now the dodos of the computer age, thoroughly extinct. Their successors are transistorized — but already it is clear that they are doomed by the rise of more advanced machines, incorporating micro-miniature components, complete circuits etched on tiny wafers of silicone.

Two IBM scientists, Erich Bloch and Robert Henle, outlined to the conference what lies ahead: 10 circuits on a wafer, perhaps 100, themselves designed and manufactured under computer control; physical size shrinking until 40 amps of power must be forced through each square inch of circuit, necessitating liquid cooling systems to remove excess heat. The computing part of the computer will become relatively cheap and very small. Earl Joseph, a computer man from Univac, even talks dreamily of a complete computer on a silicon wafer by 1975.

But it is really the colossal data-processing capacity of this new hardware which is generating the software crisis. For organizing data and instructions to go through the machine is becoming a major headache of the industry. Programming costs, according to Joseph, accounted for 5 per cent of computer systems in 1960, 50 per cent in 1965, and will rise to 80 per cent by 1970.

It is in this context that a number of computer men here have been buzzing softly about the astonishing claim being made for POP 2, a computer "language" for instructing and controlling computer systems, developed in Edinburgh University's department of machine intelligence and perception.

This has benefited from research in the U.S., Cambridge University in England and elsewhere, but has been forged into a formidable and saleable tool by two young programmers, Robin Poppelstone and Rod Burstall.

Rather than Arabic numerals replaced Roman numerals to provide mathematical tools of immensely increased power and convenience, so POP 2 offers far more powerful ways of organizing and executing computing tasks.

Some of the claims would be hard to credit if they did not come from sober and eminent academics: thus it appears that during the summer, a program has been written to allow POP 2 to be used on the 1900 Series machines built by International Computer Ltd. Much of the work has been done by a young "whiz kid" who has just left school.

To write a similar "compiler" program using conventional computer languages would normally need several man-years and tens of thousands of dollars. Indeed it is estimated that it might cost ICL $2.4 million if they were to decide to make a new American computer language called PL1, developed by IBM, available on their machines.

POP 2 actually offers a new level of simplicity, and Edinburgh schoolboys have recently been learning to use it effectively in a couple of days. During the congress, delegates were shipping around to the offices of Systems Consultants Ltd., an enterprising firm (formed incidentally by ex-IBM men) which has acquired the right to exploit the system commercially, and has been testing the system for itself.

But POP is also becoming involved in a large controversy: there are now over 1,000 programming languages in use, and it is clear that some order must be brought into this electronic Babel. The IBM giant is backing its POL 1 as a future world standard. It is a kind of all-singing, all-dancing product based on older computer languages.

On these abstruse debates depends not only the development of relatively conventional computing, but also progress in making electronic machines more "intelligent." This means equipping them to "learn to plan," so as to apply experience gained from one situation to another.

Learning and "intelligent guesswork" have already been incorporated into programs for playing chess. And Prof. E. Feigenbaum of Stanford University, described work in which a computer generates "hypotheses" about the structure of chemical compounds from spectroscopic data, and tests them, so that it is rapidly becoming, in one narrow field, a Complete Chemist.

"That's nothing compared with the awful accident we saw on our way here."

future direction, the paragraph was very carefully phrased indeed.

A pattern emerges. A dedicated liberal churchman rises to the highest office a priest can reach short of the papacy, openly criticizes the delays and conservatism of the ruling organizations of the church, vigorously opposes arch-conservatism in the closed councils of the church, takes a position diametrically opposed to that of the ruling pope on the most controversial single issue of the modern church — birth control — and returns exhausted after having fought what turns out almost a year later to have been a losing battle.

It would be grossly unfair to a dedicated and sincere priest to suggest Cardinal Leger resigned in a huff. But he must have foreseen the return to conservatism inherent in the papal encyclical on birth control. If so, then he must also have known that he faced a true crisis of conscience; on the one hand the inner conviction that his faith as a Catholic did not require unthinking adherence to concepts long since outmoded by man's greater understanding of the world around him, on the other hand his vows of obedience to the church he served.

It is possible that Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, unable as a man to renounce his convictions, and unable as a priest to violate his vows, chose the only course open to him, renunciation of the authority vested in him by his church, and a return to the simple life of an obedient priest.

Whether such a crisis of conscience actually occurred must be known only to Cardinal Leger and his intimates . . . and perhaps to Pope Paul.

Red Rocket Every Mile

Think there are too many rules and regulations for motorists these days? If so, says the B.C. Automobile Association, drivers should consider some of the rules of the road adopted by the Farmers' Anti-Auto Society back in 1903.

The speed limit on country roads this year will be secret, and the penalty for violation will be $10 for every mile an offender is caught going in excess of it. Automobiles running on country roads at night must send up a red rocket every mile, and wait ten minutes for the road to clear. They may then proceed carefully, blowing their horns and shooting Roman candles.

All members of the society will give up Sunday to chasing automobiles, shooting and shouting at them, making arrests, and otherwise discouraging country touring on that day.

Humphrey Tries to Patch Wide Democratic Rifts

CHICAGO (CP-AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey moved to patch up his fractured Democratic party Friday by calling for patience with Senator Eugene McCarthy and warning against a Republican victory in the Nov. 5 United States presidential election.

The vice-president praised Senator George McGovern's gestures of support and told Democratic party officials he thinks McCarthy and other dissidents ultimately will lend their support too.

And Humphrey, the day after accepting the Democratic presidential nomination, stepped forward to take over the party command from President Johnson who decided not to seek another four-year term.

Humphrey told the Democratic national committee that he is "the leader of our party."

O'Brien

Humphrey, with his vice-presidential choice—Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine—at his side, attended a committee election campaign workshop.

"It was sort of like a good revival meeting," Humphrey said later.

He refreshed the spirit and took aim on a kind of moving target, Richard M. Nixon, the Republican presidential nominee.

From the turbulence of the Democratic national convention scene here this week, its demonstrations and rioting, Humphrey flies north to Minnesota for a weekend of rest at his lakeside home in Waverly before officially opening his campaign Labor Day, Sept. 2, in New York.

Humphrey acknowledged the turbulent performance of the Democrats at their convention and in the convention setting, but he said he would rather have this "than a national wake like our opposition (the Republicans) had down in Miami."

Humphrey, raising a standard of unity, said Americans need to understand that the Democratic party "not only has an open door and an open heart but an open mind."

In addition, Humphrey said: "We need to ask young people to come in with us. I do not want young people pounding at the door. I want them opening the door. I want them inside the house."

Meanwhile, Lawrence F. O'Brien, a top political strategist for the Kennedys, Johnson and Humphrey, was given the dual role of chairman of the Democratic national committee and manager of Humphrey's presidential campaign.

Humphrey designated O'Brien former postmaster-general under Johnson, as his choice to succeed John M. Bailey of Connecticut as committee chairman.

His designation of the 51-year-old Massachusetts native as both committee chairman and campaign manager was a departure from usual practice, and it brought a loud cheer from committee members.

Often in the past the national committee has been bypassed in favor of the presidential campaign organization.

Humphrey opened the meeting with a long pep talk in which he attempted to heal some of the wounds opened during the often raucous four-day convention.

"Wherever we have difficulty you can trace it right to our lack of unity," he said.

He called the appearance before the convention Thursday night of McGovern of South Dakota, one of his rivals for the presidential nomination, "one of the most magnanimous gestures of loyalty" he has ever seen.

Then in an obvious reference to another rival, McCarthy of Minnesota, he added: "And I'm sure others will come too. . . . It's not easy for someone who has fought his heart out to come quickly."

Humphrey took care also to emphasize that he is going to be his own man now that he is a candidate for president.

Referring to his four years as vice-president in the Johnson administration, Humphrey said: "I have tried to do what I consider the first requirement and that was to be loyal to the president."

At the same time he said he feels that at this moment the platform "represents sound judgment."

Despite Humphrey's plea for unity he had barely left the room when the committee got in a wrangle over seating of the Georgia national committee man and committee woman.

The Georgia controversy was an outgrowth of an earlier fight over the entire delegation to the convention.

The regular party delegation had been challenged by a group headed by Julian Bond, young Negro state legislator. The Bond delegation referred to itself as the Loyalist Delegation and contended that the regular party group was unwilling to pledge its support to the presidential nominee.

The credentials committee resolved the dispute by splitting the Georgia votes between the two groups.

Guardsmen Move Out

Protesters Pack Up

CHICAGO (AP) — Anti-Vietnam war demonstrators whose confrontation with police and members of the National Guard shared the stage with the Democratic party's nomination of a presidential candidate began drifting out of Chicago Friday.

But an early-morning police raid in the Conrad Hilton Hotel continued the smoldering dissent between authorities and anti-war advocates. A leader of the demonstrators added more charges of excessive police action Friday and also announced the demonstrations have ended.

A meeting Friday afternoon in Grant Park, scheduled to discuss the police actions of the week, drew only 100 persons, most of whom were conventionally dressed. The bandshell area where thousands rallied Wednesday was almost deserted. Guardsmen withdrew from the entire downtown area and prepared to leave town.

Street sweepers clearing the remaining debris from Michigan Avenue, Chicago's showplace boulevard which became a front line of battle Wednesday and Thursday, brushed up clouds of tear gas which quickly dissipated.

Police said 583 persons were arrested during the disturbances this week and most were free on bond.

The confrontation between police and supporters of Senator Eugene McCarthy occurred after empty beer cans, glasses and smoked fish were dropped from the Hilton on guardsmen patrolling Michigan Avenue.

Police swarmed over the 15th floor, clubbed three persons and chased about 50 youths to the lobby, charging they were not registered in the hotel.

Four policemen were injured in the fracas, two of them allegedly hit in the eyes with lye. All four were treated and released from hospital.

The ousted youths sat in the lobby singing We Shall Overcome until McCarthy and his aides vouched for them. There were no arrests.

McCarthy refused to endorse Hubert Humphrey and said he would campaign for one senator whose views matched his—even Republicans if they asked him.

McCarthy's departure was in sharp contrast to his triumphant arrival five days ago when thousands of his partisans jammed Midway airport. Friday there were no spectators, but a half-dozen Secret Service agents still surrounded the senator.

Agrees to Disagree

Muskie Independent

CHICAGO (UPI)—Edmund Muskie said Friday that, under his concept of the vice-presidency, he would feel free to withhold his support from Hubert Humphrey's policies if he disagreed with him.

The tall, blue-eyed Muskie, who has been dovish on the Vietnam issue, said he felt certain he would have an opportunity to speak his mind as vice-president and to differ with Humphrey's policies.

"I'd be free to voice my opinions, my convictions in the process of shaping policy," he said and, even after that policy had been determined, how could still have to make the "decision whether to support it or not."

Well-Wisher Story Denied by Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau denied Friday he telephoned Hubert Humphrey Wednesday to wish him well just before his election as Democratic candidate.

"As usual, the press made a mistake," he said.

Humphrey was quoted as saying Trudeau had "wished me well" and wanted to get in "early congratulations."

Trudeau said he did not think Humphrey could have been deluded by "some wiseacre" into thinking he was the caller. But he had had no conversations with Humphrey.

need no training because all have completed their military service.

Western sources here said the Soviet troop movement might be the real thing or only another move in the war of nerves. Any invasion would probably aim at major cities in north-east and east Romania.

Nervousness here has also been increased by the concerted attack on President Nicolae Ceausescu in the Soviet bloc press. Ceausescu's condemnation of the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia has greatly increased his stature at home, but has made him more and more of a bete noire to the Russians.

In a speech at Cluj, Ceausescu called for the soonest possible removal of Warsaw Pact troops from Czechoslovakia so the people of that country could solve their own problems.

Continuing his defiance of Moscow, he said "people must be fully equal, have the right to express their opinion, be able to take part in the guiding of society in accordance with their capability and knowledge."

Meanwhile, in Yugoslavia, a communist newspaper warned that Russia might try invasion tactics on other countries than Czechoslovakia.

Thousands Apply To Leave Prague

PRAGUE (LDT) — Thousands of Czechs have been besieging western embassies here in a desperate attempt to leave the country.

The British Embassy closed its doors at 4 p.m. Friday on 300 Czechs seeking entry permits to Britain. Many who had not succeeded were in tears. Without the permits, they said, they would not be allowed to leave Czechoslovakia.

The Austrian legation here is issuing an average of 2,000 visas a day, and trains leaving for Austria are jammed. Other western embassies have also been inundated with applications.

Some of the lucky ones at the British Embassy, who had applied before the invasion, received their permits and left Prague on an overcrowded train for Vienna. The rest received the bitter information: "Your application must first go to London for approval."

A woman on the embassy staff, who declined to give her name, said, "We must do all we can for the Czechs, we owe that to them."

Winter Works

ment is continuing to develop a policy of wage and price restraints, through no target date can be set for announcing it formally.

Two dates had been aside for his talks with labor and management about wage and price restraints. He did not specify them.

Trudeau said projects besides winter works will be cut. The additional cuts had not yet been approved by the cabinet, but would be announced in due course.

"We will be cutting various important projects, new or ancient," the prime minister said. Some programs were more effective than others, such as manpower training, on which spending had been increased.

Mr. Trudeau said the winter works program has been a "make-work" project that is not of lasting benefit.

Expenditures must be reduced and less productive programs eliminated.

The prime minister said the government is setting out, in its program for regional development, to strengthen the whole economic base and improve employment opportunities in a more fundamental and long-range way than that represented by winter works.

The manpower training program was being expanded so that more than 300,000 adults would be trained in 1968-69, about three-quarters of them this winter, compared with 160,000 in 1964-65.

The government intended to continue emphasizing programs that were developmental rather than short-run.

From UPI

OTTAWA — Victoria's Liberal MP, David Groos, was on the list Friday when Prime Minister Trudeau announced the appointment of 16 parliamentary secretaries and added a "slightly new" concept of their functions in the House of Commons.

Groos, 50, will be secretary to Defence Minister Leo Cadieux. Trudeau said he planned to change the appointments "more frequently than has been the practice in the past" to give more MPs experience.

"It will permit a steadily increased participation of government members in the work of government," he said. He indicated the position no longer could be considered an automatic springboard into the cabinet.

Others appointed:

- Jean Canth, 50, secretary to Justice Minister John Turner.
- Florian Cote, 39, secretary to Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson.
- Yves Forest, 47, secretary to Privy Council President Donald MacDonald.

- Rosaire Gendron, 47, secretary to Health Minister John Munro.
- Jean-Pierre Goyes, 36, secretary to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.
- Herb Gray, 37, secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson.
- Stanley Haidasz, 45, secretary to Consumer Affairs Minister Ronald Basford.
- Russell Honey, 47, secretary to Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand.
- Paul Langlois, 41, secretary to Public Works Minister George McRath.
- Gerard Lusselle, 47, secretary to Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen.
- James McNulty, 50, secretary to Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.
- Robert Orange, 42, secretary to Energy, Mines and Resources Minister J. J. Greene.
- Robert Stanbury, 38, secretary to State Gerard Pelletier.
- James Walker, 57, secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau.
- Eugene Whelan, 44, secretary to Fisheries and Forestry Minister Jack Davis.

Hellyer Names Group To Explore Housing

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer hopes that an all-encompassing study of Canada's housing situation will set patterns for the improvement of urban life for the next 50 years.

He announced Thursday the appointment of six people—including a woman economist, a biologist, and a successful Ottawa house-builder—who will accompany him on visits to 25 Canadian cities this fall and produce a report of their findings by the end of this year.

Public hearings will open in Ottawa Sept. 16.

The group's main interest is the federal government's role in housing, largely responsible for ensuring a flow of funds into mortgages and encouraging better planning and building techniques.

The six are:

- Doris Boyle, a doctor of sociology and economics, and widow of George Boyle who was a founder of the Antigonish cooperative movement.

She now is head of economics at Xavier Junior College in Sydney, N.S.

- W. Peter Carter, 39, mortgage controller of the Royal Bank of Canada in Montreal, a member of the Association of Ontario Land Economists with experience in trust, realty, and financing firms.

- Pierre Dansereau, 57, a biologist and professor of ecology—the study of a living being's relationship to its environment—at the University of Montreal's Institute of Urbanism.

- Robert Campeau, 44, Ottawa builder, and land developer whose firm has constructed more than 10,000 housing units since 1950, the $40,000,000 Place de Ville hotel, and office development in downtown Ottawa.

- James Gilles, 44, an economist, dean of the graduate school of business at York University, Toronto, and former professor of urban economics at the University of California.

- C. E. Pratt, Vancouver architect and former president of the Architectural Institute of British Columbia, one of the jury which selected the design of Toronto's new city hall.

- Alfred E. Coll, executive director of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., will be the Crown-owned housing agency's liaison officer with the study group.

Mr. Hellyer said the cost should be modest, under $100,000—subject to the travel costs. Members of the group will be paid "the usual rate" for such government inquiries, $100 to $150 a day.

FUNNY BIRD

No. Funny-looking, maybe. But functional. Built for work. His natural habitat is high grass, weeds, brush. He mows them down, little grass blades to 1 1/4" saplings. With 36" or 44" mow... He floats over rough terrain—safer, faster, easier, with a longer proven life—even before medicare.

You see more JARI's in the yards and on the grounds of America than any other bird. Insist on JARI.

He'll reward your good judgment with dedicated service.

Big Bastions Bombarded

Red Rocket Rounds Roar

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces today bombarded major U.S. and South Vietnamese bastions near Saigon, in the Central Highlands and at Da Nang on the northern coast.

The guerrilla gunners mixed mortars and their biggest field arm, 122-millimetre rockets, in the nationwide bombardment. The shelling struck U.S. marine and air force airfields near Da Nang, the Bien Hoa airfield just north of the capital, and the

Envoy Lines Up Talks

Arabs Prepare Peace Feelers

CAIRO (UPI) — UN peace envoy Gunnar Jarring Friday concluded talks with Egyptian officials amid reports from diplomatic sources that the foreign ministers of the 14-nation Arab League would meet here Sunday to test feeling on an Arab "declaration of peace" to Israel.

Jarring flew from Cairo to Amman, Jordan, and then returned Friday evening to his Nicosia, Cyprus, base.

NOTHING NEW

The Egyptian newspaper Al-Ahram said Jarring "failed to bring anything new" to Cairo from his one-day visit. Jarring conferred with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, and informed sources said most of the discussion centred on Arab fears of new Israeli attacks on Jordan-based Arab guerrillas.

U.S. spokesmen said casualties and material losses ranged from "light" to "very light." But the 17 rockets that plunged into the city demolished six houses near a church, killing four South Vietnamese and wounding 15 more.

SAIGON (AP) — United States and South Vietnamese government forces, supported by dive bombers, beat back a communist drive against Da Nang, South Vietnam's second-largest city, and killed 125 infiltrators in three sharp battles, military spokesmen reported Friday. Elsewhere, ground action was sporadic.

NORTH OF SAIGON

The battles occurred Thursday night to 25 miles south of Da Nang, which is about 200 miles north of Saigon.

South Vietnamese rangers, backed by an armored column and dive bombers, reported killing 87 communists in the heaviest of the three battles. Ranger losses were put at five dead and 23 wounded.

A mile away, U.S. marines came under heavy small-arms fire while combing the area for infiltrators. The communist force pulled back after 3½ hours and a sweep of the battlefield turned up 24 communist bodies. Marine losses were reported at two dead and 41 wounded.

Another U.S. marine unit clashed with two platoons of North Vietnamese soldiers—70 to 80 men—about 25 miles south of Da Nang. The communist troops pulled back later.

In the central lowlands, communist troops were still reported holding out Friday night in a South Vietnamese government outpost they overran early in the day, 15 miles west of Quang Ngai City.

In Saigon, police were reported to have nipped a Viet Cong guerrilla sabotage and assassination plot with the arrest of about a dozen suspects in Cholon, the Chinese sector.

In another development, American prisoners rioted Friday in the U.S. Army's largest penal stockade in South Vietnam, at Long Binh. One prisoner was killed, 59 prisoners, four military police and the acting warden injured, and a number of buildings in the compound burned.

Czech Plants Report Material Shortages

PRAGUE (AP)—Czechoslovak industrial plants reported Friday they are running out of material. Reports from various regions indicated that many plants are working at half capacity or less, apparently because of disruptions caused by the Soviet bloc occupation.

An unsigned survey made available to Western correspondents estimated that losses to the country's economy amounted to about $250,000,000 during the first week of the occupation.

The survey listed disrupted road and rail traffic, halted plane connections and grave disturbances in communications and food distribution. The survey estimated that it would take at least two years to overcome the effects of the occupation.

Travel Tips with Stan Delaplane

Can't Lose on Thames Cruise

GREAT MARLOW, England—We rented a cruiser with six berths for $125 a week and set off up the Thames. Probably the most inexpensive week I've had in England—prices in London are high.

Shopping the river villages for food goes about $25 a week for food. But you'd better add $25 more for pub stops. The finest inns of merry England are on the river.

In early days the river inns were the weekend hideaways for London's playboys. And most of the antique pubs have been patronized by the merry monarchs and their merry maidens. In more recent years, Christine Keeler spent some time at a riverside house. Somebody is sure to point this out to you.

An elegant pub is the Compleat Angler at Marlow. We drove our cruise boat alongside the mooring—it's like parking a car. Went up to a lovely crystal-and-silver dining room and had smoked trout with horseradish and foaming beer.

"Could you give us some idea of what our day-to-day costs will be in Europe?" We all spend differently. If you smoke or drink, these will be a high cost item. Scotch is $1 to $1.50. Cigarettes will run 50 cents to $1 a package. Hotel rooms seldom go under $20 double in the capitals. Now—how do you beat this? There are local cigarettes in many places that are cheap. Sintras, Estoril in Portugal. Papastatos filters in Greece and so on. A fifth of Scotch at a store in Germany is $3.75, $4 in Italy. (That's even cheaper than in Scotland!)

There ARE smaller hotels at better prices, of course. But we don't know them, our travel agents don't know them, and they don't advertise. You can sometimes run these down by going to the government tourist office after you've landed and have a first hotel. Shop the tourist office list.

with a taxi you take by the hour. (And be sure you and the driver come to an agreement on the hour price before you start riding around.)

"We will be on a three-week excursion on the European trip. It is not a tour, so we must watch our money."

The movement of travel costs money. But you can budget more time to cheap countries; Greece is cheap. Portugal is cheap. France is expensive. Germany should be cheap, but for some reason—maybe because I didn't have the language—it cost me twice what I had budgeted.

Italy is expensive. England cost more than I thought it would. The ads that devaluation of the pound had increased your dollar by 16 per cent are so much wind in the willows. Swinging London swings a lot on Diner's Club cards.

London hotels have developed an exchange for the dollar all their own. I got caught at checkout time—(before the banks opened)—where they took $3 on the $100. Not once. Three different hotels. It's the new look. And to them, it looks good.

A German hotel got me on a Sunday morning for $5 on the $100. (Cash money in banks, always say. But I forget to do it.)

"Going to be in Mexico for a few weeks. Sure would like to find a small town, good but not expensive hotel. Some time in the sun."

Take a look at the country around Queretaro—that's north and inland from Mexico City. San Miguel de Allende has an American colony and art school. Guanajuato is an old colonial silver mining town. Sunny. Altitude about 6,000 keeps it cool enough.

"You mentioned Portugal being cheap. We wonder if we

Airport Controllers Sign Pact

OTTAWA (CP)—Negotiators for air traffic controllers and the government put their signatures to a new two-year contract Friday.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury commended negotiators for the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and the treasury board for averting a strike and a national air tieup.

The parties announced Wednesday that they had reached a settlement. Friday, the association announced that a majority of its membership had ratified the agreement.

"It now looks like there will be about 70 per cent approval," John-David Lyon, president of the 1,000-member association, said in an interview.

About 80 per cent of the association membership, located at airports across Canada, have already voted and just over two-thirds favored settlement.

Judge to Decide In Police Assault

An 18-year-old youth was committed for trial Friday by Magistrate William Ostler on a charge of assaulting Constable Jack Blaney with the intention of resisting arrest.

William Harvey, 427 Hillside, has elected trial by a judge without a jury.

The preliminary hearing was told by Constable Jack Blaney how he stopped a car for a spot check at about 10:25 p.m. Aug. 18 in the 400-block Hillside.

Constable Blaney said Harvey came out onto the porch of his home and was eventually arrested for causing a disturbance by swearing.

Constable Blaney said Harvey pushed him and the constable swung Harvey around and put on a restraining hold. The pair then fell to the floor of the porch where Harvey fought violently, court was told.

Two other police officers attacked and Harvey was arrested, Bail was set at $500.

David Petrie, 19, of 734 Lampson, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a $250 bond for one year on a charge of theft. He pleaded guilty last week when court was told he stole a pair of pants valued at $9.95 Aug. 22 from Woodward's.

Two young men who had been drinking considerably Aug. 16 helped themselves to two books on the front seat of a car. The books were entitled A History of East Africa and An Introduction to World Politics.

James Barrell and Garry Clarke of 1211 North Park pleaded guilty to theft and were fined $25 each.

Magistrate Ostler commented: "Perhaps a suitable punishment would be to make them sit down and read them both."

Prosecutor John Macintyre added: "Or make them write them out."

Magistrate Ostler said later: "Of course it was theft but I think the suitable punishment is to fine them for being drunk. This is one of the cases I wished I could give them an absolute discharge as they do in England. It would be of great help."

Alexander Jacob, 19, of 3745 Tillicum, was fined $35 when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor.

Fined for careless driving: William Andrews, 1946 Mayfair, $40; Trevor Holgate, 1280 Dunsterville, $40; Jagar Singh Judge, 1703 Burnside, $35; James McKinney, 1940 Port, $35; Allen Sawin, 3255 Glasgow, $35; John Scott of Robson, B.C., $35; John Monaghan, 1560 Westall, $35.

Mining Claim Testimony:

Thatched Roof on Sticks

LONDON (CP) Harold Huxley testified Friday at the extradition hearing of Myer Rush that he had fully investigated two companies controlled by the Toronto stock promoter and found no assets belonging to either.

Huxley, an official of the Ontario Securities Commission from Toronto, also said he went to Panama and Guyana to investigate statements by Rush and his associates of promising gold and diamond-mining developments undertaken by their organizations.

In Panama, Huxley testified, he found no mining of any sort, and in the hinterland of Guyana he found what Rush and his associates described as a company compound.

Huxley said it was a thatched roof on sticks—"like a carrot"—with no signs of recent activity. The area was "badly overgrown."

Huxley was the first major prosecution witness to be called in the Bow Street magistrate's court hearing of the Ontario government's request for Rush's extradition.

Rush faces a series of charges in Toronto which include conspiracy to defraud the public of $100,000 in stock sales.

FIFTEEN DAYS

Magistrate Kenneth Barraclough adjourned the hearing until Tuesday. It appeared the Rush case may not be completed until next Thursday or Friday. Should the court find a prima facie case for extradition, Rush would have 15 days to appeal.

The charges against him are scheduled to be heard in the Ontario Supreme Court Sept. 9, and crown officers said there may have to be a postponement of that opening.

Christopher French, chief lawyer for the crown, sought to support charges that Rush was involved in fraud in his direction of British Overseas Mutual Fund Corp. and Darien Explorations Ltd.

STOCK BUYERS

He also sought to support a charge that although the alleged conspiracy to fraud was mainly aimed at American stock buyers, a part of the operations were conducted in Canada, thereby giving Canadian authorities jurisdiction in bringing charges against him and seeking his extradition from Britain.

Written evidence presented by the crown depicted Rush and his Toronto partners—who included Joseph Williams, a lawyer—as having letter drops in a number of countries including Panama, the Bahamas and Guyana.

HARRY YOUNG'S Business Topics

Japanese Invent Carbecue

One of Japan's enterprising engineering companies has constructed a carbecue, the purpose of which is to reduce old automobiles to a well-cooked piece of Grade A steel.

The cars are incinerated while turning on a rotating spit, barbecue style. The unit costs $500,000 so that it would have to do a big volume of business to make it pay.

The main snag of the carbecue, over and above cost, is that the burning process is certain to produce air pollution, which in many communities would make it almost as objectionable as the car junkyards.

Zeckendorf

EXPANSION PLANNED

Canadian Hydrocarbons of Calgary says it expects to spend $2,000,000 in the next three years on Vancouver Island, consequent upon its acquisition of management control of Fort St. John Petroleum.

Fort St. John owns the butane-air utility franchise for Nanaimo and its operations will be merged with those of Rockgas Propane, Canadian Hydrocarbons' Vancouver Island subsidiary.

INCOME GAIN

Canadian Hydrocarbons net earnings in the first half of 1968 were $2,051,099 (81 cents) against $1,921,989 (79 cents) a year ago.

The company expects natural gas will reach Vancouver Island within the next two or three years. The consolidation of its own division with that of Fort

St. John will give the company a favorable position to penetrate further its marketing area on the Island, Canadian Hydrocarbons says in its interim report to shareholders.

HEAVILY IN DEBT

Bill Zeckendorf, the U.S. real estate tycoon who headed Webb and Knapp, says he has only $1,885,620 to pay for his debts of $73,076,100.

He is disputing a debt of $55,480,700 arising out of his association with Webb and Knapp, and lists the Bank of Nova Scotia and British Commercial Property Investment Canada Ltd. as his largest creditors.

Zeckendorf now has a $37,500 a year job with General Property, with a deferred compensation of $12,500 a year for nine years. How can a one-time millionaire live on a pittance like that?

Zeckendorf's real estate empire crumbled around his ears when he overstretched his credit lines.

TRADING STARTED

Great National Land and Investment of Vancouver became a listed stock on the Vancouver Stock Exchange Friday and celebrated its arrival by announcing a record first quarter for its current fiscal year.

CREST MAKES DEAL

Crest Ventures has entered into an agreement with Four Aces Investments of Vancouver to undertake exploration work on its Crest Silver Limited property. In return Four Aces would earn the right to 70 per cent interest in the property.

A Crest's annual meeting held Friday it was also reported United Asbestos would spend $15,000 on Crest property adjacent to United's Red Top claims.

PROFITS DOUBLED

A net profit of $422,384 for the six months to June 30 is reported by Highland Bell and Mastodon-Highland Bell Mines. This is an increase from $223,220 in the corresponding period of 1967.

The company says its exploration and development programs are proceeding in B.C., Ontario, Quebec and Newfoundland.

TAKEOVER COMPLETED

Acklands has acquired more than 90 per cent of the A and B shares of Ashdown Hardware as a result of its recent takeover bid.

PROMISING HOLE

Walter Eilers, president of Silurian Chieftain, reports the latest hole drilled at its Alice Arm property has assayed .365 per cent molybdenum over 140 feet. The hole — No. 49 — is 100 feet south of Hole 48 where 2.05 per cent molybdenum was found over 177 feet. The rig is being moved 800 feet north over Sunshine Creek to test a new anomaly.

SALE HELPS WESTON

A non-recurring profit of $9,408,000 was made in the first half of 1968 by George Weston Ltd. from the sale of its 20 per cent interest in Fine Fare (Holdings) Ltd.

The sale of these assets was the main reason for the increase in Weston's consolidated net income for the six months to June 30 to $15,092,000 ($1.34). This compared with a net income of $5,859,000 (49 cents) in the corresponding period of 1967.

FARE SHARE

Leaving out the Fine Fare share sale, Weston's operating income in the period rose 10 per cent to $5,192,000 (43 cents) from $4,704,000 (39 cents) a year ago.

The improved operating results were achieved, said K. G. Dalgleish, president, despite a significant reduction in profits from its E. B. Eddy forest

Says Hellyer

Airline Shift Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer confirmed Friday that the government is studying a possible issue of Air Canada stock to investors.

Part public and part private ownership of the national airline is one of about half a dozen choices the government has open to it in deciding the future of Air Canada, he told a news conference.

James Richardson, minister of portfolio and former Winnipeg investment dealer, is making the study.

One of Options

One of the options, he said, is that Air Canada remain as it is, a subsidiary of Canadian National Railways and a crown corporation.

Prime Minister Trudeau was asked at a news conference Friday whether Richardson owns shares in CPR, whose airline competes with Air Canada. He said he did not know.

He said he will discuss with Richardson any possible conflict of interest. It might depend on the number of shares involved.

Hellyer said a decision will be announced "in a few weeks" on how Air Canada is going to finance the big orders for new aircraft that it has placed.

Late This Fall

But he indicated no immediate action is likely in appointing a successor to G. R. McGregor as president of the airline. The company's board of directors meets next late in September, and some action might be taken then.

The president is officially appointed by the board. But the government indicates its preference.

Hellyer thought it should have a say, since the company reports to Parliament through him and he has to work closely with the Air Canada president.

Low Vocational Bid By Vancouver Firm

The lowest of six tenders submitted Friday for construction of the proposed Greater Victoria regional vocational school was for $2,285,000 from the Vancouver firm of C. J. Oliver Ltd.

and Dutton Construction, Victoria, $2,321,000; G. H. Wheaton, Victoria, $2,330,000; Farmer Construction, Victoria, $2,370,000; Bird Construction, Victoria, $2,424,104; and Laking Construction and Equipment, Vancouver, $2,473,219.

Wilson Provides Punch As Tigers Top Orioles

Earl Wilson took things in hand Friday as Detroit Tigers stretched their American Baseball League lead to seven games.

The veteran righthander, having only a so-so season after winning 22 games last year, drove in four runs and pitched a four-hitter to give the Tigers a 9-1 victory over second-place Baltimore Orioles.

Wilson received a standing ovation from the 53,575 fans, the largest crowd to watch the Tigers in Detroit since 1961, when he smacked his fifth home run of the season in the second inning—a three-run blow.

Wilson also capped off his team's five-run outburst in the third inning with a run-scoring single.

THIRD IN A ROW

The triumph was Detroit's third straight and fourth in five games. Baltimore, only four games out on Tuesday, now has lost three in a row.

Third-place Boston Red Sox fell apart in the final inning when Washington Senators, making a late-season bid to escape the cellar, scored five unearned runs in the ninth to down the Sox, 5-1.

Ken Harrelson had put Boston ahead in the second inning with his 33rd home run and Gary Bell was cruising along with a four-hit shutout until the ninth.

But throwing errors on bunts by first baseman Dalton Jones and catcher Russ Gibson keyed the Senators uprising.

SEASONS STOPS CARDS

In the National League, New York Mets moved to within a game of seventh-place Houston Astros by surprising the run-away leaders, St. Louis Cardinals, 8-2, behind the three-hit pitching of Tom Seaver.

Seaver pitched seven perfect innings before Orlando Cepeda led off the two-run Cardinal eighth with a double to right field.

Ron Santo drove in all the Chicago Cub runs with a pair of homers as the hosts downed Houston, 5-3.

WIN FOR JENKINS

Ferguson Jenkins picked up the win, his 16th against 12 losses, scattering 10 hits and striking out eight batters to bring his National League-leading total to 218.

Cincinnati Reds held onto their one percentage point lead in the race for second place despite a 4-7 loss to the Philadelphia Phillies when Los Angeles Dodgers stopped third-place San Francisco Giants, 5-4.

Doug Clemens' three-run homer in the sixth inning helped the Phillies to a 7-0 lead in a game which had both starters leave the game through injuries.

WRENCHED A KNEE

Winner Chris Short wrenched a knee making a pivot at first base and loser Jim Maloney developed a blister on his pitching hand.

Ken Boyer's two-out pinch single in the eighth inning scored Willie Davis with the tie-breaking run to spark the Dodger win.

In the other game, run-scoring singles by Felipe Alou and Felix Millan in the fifth and fourth innings helped Milt Pappas give Atlanta Braves a 2-0 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pappas left the game with an injury in the ninth.

Newcombe, 1967 winner here when the tournament was all amateur and at No. 4 the highest men's seed to see action, crushed Allan Quay of South Africa, N.Z., 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. Both are pros.

Riessen, a new pro who formerly teamed with Graebner in doubles, found a rugged opponent in young Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia, but finally prevailed on an overpowering service and deadly volleying, 11-9, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Riessen is seeded 15th.

Graebner, singles ace of the current U.S. Davis Cup squad and a semi-finalist at Wimbledon this year, had to produce some of his finest shotmaking in subduing Premjit Lal of India, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Happily, amateur golf has come to terms with it all far more sensibly than the professional game. Recently, in fact, the Royal and Ancient turned down an offer by an industrial concern which wanted to send two British holers-in-one on a free golfing holiday to America.

Quite rightly, the R. & A. decided that the prize was so out of proportion that it would jeopardize the players' amateur status.

Yet the professional circuit still competes for more and bigger hole-in-one prizes. Okay, it's a useful sponsorship gimmick—but only when the prize-money for the honest toil of a tournament does not suffer as a result. Unfortunately, it frequently does.

For example, though there is $180,000 to be won on the British circuit this summer, more than half the tournament professionals have not yet won £100.

And this only applies to those who have actually qualified for tournaments. There are at least another 100 would-be money-winners who have yet to land their first penny.

By the end of the Wills tournament, with seven weeks to go, only 17 players had topped the £1,000 mark, and even the leading moneywinner, Brian Huggett, had grossed only £3,165 for some brilliant golf. This is roughly what Arnie Palmer would pack on to his caddy in tips in a successful season.

Certainly, the Wills event was better organized than most. It spread the prizes more rationally. The 40th man took £50, which at least covered most of his expenses for the week.

But in many tournaments so much emphasis is placed on the big first prize, that you can actually finish five shots behind the winner—having played only fractionally more than a shot-per-round worse than the champ—and go away empty-handed.

I am not pleading for a better deal for unsuccessful players. But I do suggest that the circuit will only grow and thrive so long as younger challengers are encouraged to stick at the game. And by encouragement I mean cash for good effort.

Hearing Ends

A weeks-long court hearing ended Friday in San Francisco with a verdict that San Francisco Warriors of the National Basketball Association cannot compel Rick Barry (above) to play for them. One of the game's top stars, Barry jumped to the Oakland Oaks of the American League and sat out last season.

This is what makes those hole-in-one bonanzas so irritating. Charles C. Bloggs Esq., can hit a lucky ace in a round of 87, and survive financially on the circuit. Yet a far better player can string together four really promising 71s—and have to retire to his shop to start saving his pence for next year's attempt.

So long as these £1,000 ace prizes continue, they will always be a source of annoyance to those who really know the economics of the game.

If that kind of cash is available, let it be spent on skill instead of a shot in the dark.

Rhodesia Out Of Olympics

BULAWAYO (Reuters) — Rhodesia has dropped plans to send a team to the Olympics in Mexico City, a leading Rhodesian Olympics official said Friday.

Douglas Downing, president of the National Olympic Committee of Rhodesia, said in a statement that Rhodesia had accepted "enforced exclusion" from the Games.

Rhodesian sports officials previously were pressing ahead with plans to send a team to the Games, despite the non-arrival of an official invitation to attend from the Mexican organizers.

Earlier this month, a Mexican official said United Nations sanctions ruled out Rhodesia's participation.

"In accepting enforced exclusion from the 1968 Mexican Olympics we express the hope that interference — authorized or assumed — by the United Nations in the affairs of the international Olympic movement will not create that type of unity between sportsmen which currently exist between nations," the statement said Thursday.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith announced last month that Rhodesia planned to send a 17-man team, including two Negroes, to the Games in October.

When the lists of the countries expected to compete were issued in Mexico City Aug. 17, Rhodesia was not on it.

College Youngster Leads U.S. Amateur

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — 54-hole total of 226. Eric Hanson of Toronto had 83 for a total of 234.

Scrambling Bruce Fleisher bluffed two of his last four holes on the way to a one-over-par 71 Friday and stormed into a two-stroke lead after three rounds in the 68th U.S. amateur golf championship.

The 19-year-old junior college student from Hialeah, Fla., was four under par through 54 holes with a 214 total and in excellent position to capture the U.S. crown in his first try.

His closest rival in the field of 62 was Hubie Green, the Alabama amateur king who shared the halfway lead with Fleisher. Bob Barabara of Osseo, Minn., a 20-year-old University of Houston student who shot an even par 70, was three back at 217.

British amateur champion Michael Bonallack carded a 75 for 219 and a share of fifth place. Gary Cowan, the 1966 U.S. amateur champion, shot 73 for a CALGARY (CP) — Carol Mann of Buffalo, N.Y., shot a five-under-par 68 Friday to take the first-round lead in the Willow Park women's invitational open professional golf tournament.

Miss Mann took a one-stroke lead over Sharon Miller of Battle Creek, Mich., by shooting 34's on both the front and back nines.

KATHY THIRD

In third place was Kathy Whitworth of Dallas, Tex., with a three-under-par 70. Tied for fourth in the 54-hole $15,000 tournament were Shirley Englehorn of Caldwell, Idaho; Murle Lindstrom of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S.C., and Peggy Wilson of Fallbrook, Calif., all at 71.

LOW AMATEUR

Englehorn and Lindstrom both shot 32 on the back nine, four under par, to make strong comebacks from first-nine scores of 39 on the 6,400-yard course.

Low amateur and tied for seventh place was Marilyn Karch of Calgary at 72.

She was followed in the amateur standings by Barbara Turnbull of Saskatoon at 77 and Marilyn Dahl of Calgary at 80. Sandra Post, the only Canadian professional in the tournament, made a slow start with a first nine score of 39, two over par.

On the back nine she overcame problems with her putter and was two under at 34 for a 73 and a share of 12th place.

Bob Murphy Retains Touch To Lead Thunderbird Pack

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP)—Brash Bob Murphy, the red-hot, red-haired rookie, stormed out of a log jam Friday and seized the first round-lead in the $150,000 Thunderbird golf classic with a four-under-par 68.

"It was kind of a steady round," said the sticky Floridian who won last week's Philadelphia Classic and led through the first three rounds of the Westchester Classic the week before.

He birdied the seventh, eighth and ninth holes from five, 10 and 20 feet for an outgoing 33 and came home in 35 with a birdie on the par 11th.

He had a two-stroke lead over a group of 12 knotted at 70.

One stroke back of the 12 were Al Balding of Toronto, Arnold Palmer, Bob Lunn and Johnny Pott.

George Knutson of Toronto was disqualified. Officials said he did not sign his score card.

Among the huge group who took two-under 70s on the 7,035-yard Upper Montclair Country Club course were Billy Casper, the season's leading money-winner, British Open champion Gary Player and Australian veteran Bruce Crampton.

The others were rookie Jerry About, Steve Reid, Homero Blancas, Dudley Wagon, Bert Weaver, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Mason Rudolph, Lee Elder and Lou Graham.

Pre-tournament favorite Jack Nicklaus was one over at 73.

Animal Lovers Win Reprieve for Dogs

NAPLES (UPI)—Acting under protests from animal lovers from all over Europe, city officials Friday granted a last-minute reprieve to 327 dogs slated to be put to death as suspected rabies carriers. An inspector of the Italian ministry of health is investigating the situation.

But Will Chi-Chi?

New Russian Invader Flies Solo Mission

LONDON (Reuters)—An An-An, the giant male panda, arrived from Moscow Friday night to meet London's Chi-Chi again.

Zoo keepers hope that this time the couple will make love, not war.

Munching apples on the plane, An-An, 11, flew in luxury from Moscow for an elaborately planned meeting in the London zoo with the reluctant Chi-Chi, who previously scorned An-An's advances.

This time, Russian and British zoo officials hope the encounter will be successful, producing the first baby panda in Europe. Or better still, twins, one for each country.

The two are likely to meet immediately. Chi-Chi's enclosure has been divided. The two pandas will be able to look at each other through a partition for several days.

An offspring of the two pandas—they are found only in China—would be the third born in captivity. The last was at Peking zoo four years ago.

Smiths at organ in Church of Our Lord

Silver Anniversary Tribute

Own Song Will Greet Celebrating Couple

A musical greeting will mark the 25th anniversary of organist Jack Ingram Smith and his wife Lillian at the 12:15 p.m. recital today in Christ Church Cathedral.

Cathedral organist Richard Proudman, in the last of the summer series of recitals, will play Sunset on the Olympics, a composition of Mr. Smith's. A retired city hall cashier, Mr. Smith has been organist at the Church of Our Lord for many years. Before that he was organist at Centennial and First United Churches and has deputized at St. John's Anglican Church.

He came to Victoria as a boy from his native Edinburgh. He and Mrs. Smith, a native of Bristol, were married in Emmanuel Baptist Church, where Mrs. Smith is still a member, on Aug. 31, 1943.

In the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and now is on the symphony board. She was one of the first members to join. Her husband has written about 10 organ pieces and three songs for voice.

"I write untuned music, not dry stuff," Mr. Smith said Friday. "It's a hobby with me."

In his earlier years he studied with well-known Victoria organists Jesse Longfield, Alfred Gurney and F. J. Chubb.

Sunset on the Olympics is a tone poem of a summer evening with the quiet waters of Juan de Fuca Strait in the foreground portrayed by an expressive melody. The piece builds to a climax with a musical description of the majestic mountains and ends quietly in a benediction.

Also on the program will be music not previously heard in the cathedral—the second and third movements from Hindemith's First Sonata; the Wedge prelude by Bach; a sketch using the trumpet stop, by Schumann, and a rhapsody by Howells.

Ibos Bitter About Britain

Church Trying to Help in Biafra

A report has just been received from Biafra by Rev. Dr. Kenneth Prior of the United Church, former agricultural missionary who was on loan to the Church Missionary Society for special rural work in Biafra for 18 years and in Angola for 12.

Dr. Prior will speak on the crisis in Nigeria at 11 a.m. Sunday in First United Church. His report came from the Rt. Rev. G. E. I. Cockin, Anglican Bishop of Owerri, through the missionary society's London office.

Owerri is less than 60 miles from the fighting lines in three directions. Practically every village school has been turned into a refugee camp, the bishop reports. Every family has more than its own number of private refugees, relatives or friends in wave after wave.

CROWDED CONDITIONS

Somewhat they have been absorbed but the result is crowded housing and near starvation.

The Roman Catholic Caritas and the World Council of Churches, to which the contribution of the German Church has been outstanding, have done their best to fly in medicines and dried milk but it is only a drop in the ocean.

The local churches have been in the forefront of many community efforts to help refugees.

WAR OF SURVIVAL

The general attitude of the churches in Biafra is that of total commitment to the war of survival. Sermons are reminiscent of the more bellicose preaching of the 1914-1918 war. The Hausa Vandals are the Amalekites, and the faith of many in God and in the efficacy of prayer has been shaken by His failure to vindicate His people.

No Ibo now ever thinks of himself as a Nigerian, nor can he conceive how in a Nigerian federation he could ever be anything but a member of a subject and outlanded people.

STILL HARRED

It was not so much the massacres in the north that convinced them of this, but the fact that when survivors had reached Lagos or the west they could still be harried on the way home by northern soldiers.

The events of the war have only gone to increase the conviction of the Biafrans that they had to depend on themselves for their own security and they believe they could have achieved this had it not been for the massive Russian and British aid to the federal side.

The bitterness is against Britain much more than against Russia or even Nigeria. The Biafrans feel they have been betrayed by their friends.

When the delegation of British churchmen, headed by the Bishop of Birmingham, came to Owerri, the lesson chosen was that of Judas selling his friend for a handful of silver, a field of blood being bought with the proceeds.

This is too near the truth, Bishop Cockin says, if one shares their view that Britain's interest in Biafran oil lies behind the supply of arms to Nigeria.

At first Britain and the companies were inclined to sit on the fence. Then Nigeria asked for planes and was refused, so they got them from Russia. Britain decided it could not afford the cold war in Africa and ever since has been attempting to retain its oil by keeping Nigeria sweet, at ever-increasing cost.

"In spite of this, the feeling towards us individually has been remarkably restrained and often absurdly considerate. The other evening I was 45th in a queue for petrol and unlikely to get any. Some of these waiting had organized things to see that all was fair and above board, but insisted that I should come and take mine first."

"As a church our reputation has been salvaged to some extent by the visit of the Bishop and the other British churchmen and by the efforts of the World Council of Churches. But no one would begrudge the Roman Catholic Church the acclaim won by the central organs of their church. The Anglican Church is not equipped for that kind of thing, more the pity. They have benefitted, too, by the instinctive understanding of the many Irish among their missionaries for a struggle like that which they themselves have fought and won."

Bishop Cockin says his account is not a dispassionate one.

TOO INVOLVED

"I am too much involved for that. I have as good cause as any to know that Ibo can be as exasperating as they can be admirable and to their neighbors even their admirable qualities can be exasperating. But before British people rush into judgments they might pause to remember that the Ibo's faults as the NOOs of colonialism have often been on a small scale what ours have been on the big."

"When the war is over both sides will be faced with the enormous problem of young men with no work to return to and having learned to use force to get what they want."

"Increasingly one hears: 'If we had known war would be like this...' It has been an expensive lesson."

World Problems

Politics, Trash Parish Topics

Five prominent Victorians will give a series of talks on problems facing the world, at 8 p.m. Wednesdays in the parish hall of Christ Church Cathedral.

First speaker next Wednesday, is Liberal MP David Anderson, Esquimalt-Saanich, who said he will take an objective look at the political scene.

The following Wednesday Dr. Melvyn Faber, of the English department of the University of Victoria, will provide a layman's look at the world of waste in a talk entitled Man and His Garbage.

Ronald Robinson, production manager of radio station CMTV, has chosen the topic Communication, Whose Side are You On? for Sept. 18.

On Sept. 25, businessman Peter Pollen will examine the harsh realities facing the world of business and economics. On Oct. 2, psychiatrist Dr. Charles Gregory will discuss The Drop Out Phenomenon. The same evening a film titled Choose Your Life, which deals with social problems, will be shown.

MASSIVE CHANGES

The series was planned by the youth groups of the cathedral and St. Luke's Anglican Church. Purpose of the program is to provide an intelligent appraisal of the massive social changes taking place in the modern world.

"The church is interested in secular events," Dean Brian Whitlow said of the series, "and this ought to be shown."

Cwm Rhondda Hymn Strictly Welsh Affair

If you know what Cwm Rhondda means you're probably a Welshman.

But you don't need to be a Welshman to appreciate the warm beauty of the singing of a Welsh choir.

Greater Victorians will have the opportunity to hear the Pentecost male choir at 8:30 p.m. Sept. 13 in Memorial Arena. The 90-voice choir will sing in aid of the building fund of the G. R. P. A. R. C. handicapped children's clinic. Sponsors are 800 Pacific Wing RCAF. Assisting artists are Beverly Humphreys, mezzo-soprano, winner of many British awards and baritone Gwynn Morgan, star of Covent Garden Opera.

Like all Welsh choirs, this one has several hymns in its repertoire. One of the most popular is Cwm Rhondda or Guide Me O Thou Great Jehovah, which the choir will sing here.

'Rebellious' Man Creates Evil

Two Challenge Atheist View

By DON GAIN

Two former Victoria missionaries have challenged statements by Victoria Humanist Dr. Marian Sherman.

"They are Rev. Dr. H. E. D. Ashford, 9 Moss, and Rev. Dr. Kenneth Prior, 1310 Dallas. Dr. Sherman, in an interview with The Daily Colonist last week, said that a believer cannot be a thinker and a thinker cannot be a believer.

REGULAR ARMY

Dr. Ashford, who was in the regular army in the First World War, was an RCAF chaplain in the Second World War and was a United Church missionary in India for nine years, in addition to being pastor of various churches, quoted G. K. Chesterton.

"When men cease to believe in a deity, they do not believe in nothing, but in anything," Dr. Sherman, who has been an atheist for 22 years, said people hate the word atheist.

ANY WONDER?

"Is it any wonder?" Dr. Ashford asked Friday.

Dr. Sherman said no child was ever born believing in God.

"Nor was any child born disbelieving," said Dr. Ashford.

Dr. Sherman falls into the trap of believing that God causes suffering or tolerates it, Dr. Ashford said.

"Surely it is rebellious man who creates the evil and God cannot interfere without denying man the freedom He has granted him," he asked.

"If God eliminated all evil and suffering, where would universal law come in?"

Dr. Prior, a former United Church agricultural missionary with the Church Missionary Society in Africa for 30 years, took issue with Dr. Sherman's statement that belief is a prejudice instilled in youth.

"Would it not conversely be true that unbelief is a prejudice?" he asked.

Dr. Sherman does not believe in life after death.

"This is tragic and the Apostle refers to this," Dr. Prior said.

The quotation: "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them."

"Would it not conversely be

Dr. Prior said he was amused that Dr. Sherman, an atheist, could believe that God is love.

"She is an atheist and does not believe in God, yet God is love and she does believe in love, so really she does believe in God."

"God is love, as the Scripture tells us, but He is also a God of wrath and a consuming fire. Without doubt, Dr. Sherman's idea of God is too small, somewhat childish and totally inadequate."

Progressives Disappointed

Pope's Colombian Tour Public Relations Victory

By DAVID BELNAP

BOGOTA, Colombia (LAT)—In the modern idiom, the visit of Pope Paul to Latin America was a popular and public relations success but a disappointment in terms of its probable effect on the future course of the Catholic church in this hemisphere.

To many observers, the pontiff's pronouncements here revealed him to be a tormented man, in conflict between the liberalism of the Second Vatican Council which he inherited from Pope John XXIII and the conservative tradition of the ancient, sacramental and ritualistic church.

Paul became the first Pope ever to visit this continent of more than one-third of the world's Catholics for two declared reasons:

To attend the world eucharistic conference whose goal is strengthening Catholic faith through worship of holy communion, and to inaugurate the second general conference of Latin American bishops.

MORE IMPORTANT

To Paul, perhaps, the eucharistic congress was the more important mission since he repeatedly stressed the religious nature of his journey and his condition here as a pilgrim.

For its practical effects on the church's future here, however, his charge to the bishops was the more important since these prelates now will meet for two weeks to prepare guidelines for the Latin American church in the post-Vatican II epoch.

Resounding spiritual and emotional response followed the pontiff wherever he went in this capital city of Latin America's fourth most populous country.

However, his visit was a practical disappointment for the progressive elements of the church in Latin America who had hoped he would clearly instruct his bishops to get the church firmly on the road to leadership in fostering social and economic reforms.

BORN TO BE POOR

He mentioned the marginal living conditions of more than 70 per cent of Latin America's population several times during his 56 hours here and he insisted more than once that the Vatican is fully aware of the need for change.

But in spite of his pledge to defend the cause of the poor, the pontiff disappointed liberal elements in the church by appearing to support the philosophy that humanity is hierarchical.

Addressing peasants and later students, workers and businessmen, he seemed to favor an idea which for years was unchallenged in Latin America but which is now wholly discredited: the poor were born to be poor, a condition they should bear with resignation in the certain knowledge of a reward in Heaven.

One Strike—Then ChaosUnions Warn of Bill Revolt

By DON COLLINS
Tame just one small mouse by force and you'll stampede the elephants.

An odd comparison, perhaps, but as Labor Day 1968 approaches there are signs that this is the warning unions have in store for the provincial government where compulsory arbitration is concerned.

Full implementation of controversial Bill 33 in one small labor dispute could spell serious trouble — possibly even a general strike that would paralyze industry throughout the province.

While some labor leaders say a general strike could be the end result, none wants to go on record at the moment as proposing such a drastic measure.

When he addressed 200 members of the Kiwanis Club in Vancouver Thursday, Jack Moore said compulsory arbitration and dispute settlement through Bill 33 would lead to a revolt by both unionists and industrialists.

In an interview Friday night, he told The Daily Colonist he had purposely steered clear of what form such a revolt might take. Decisions regarding this could only be made when and if the occasion arose, he said.

Mr. Moore, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said he included industrialists in the revolt conception for this reason:

"If industry arbitrarily has to pay a rate it considers too high it will probably rebel."

CERTAIN SECTIONS

He said it is known that certain sections of "big" industry are opposed to full implementation of Bill 33.

In Victoria, labor council secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan said unions would oppose full use of the bill "with all the vigor and determination they are capable of mustering."

The B.C. Federation of Labor has already established policy that would call for mobilization against compulsory settlement.

CONFRONTATION

This, labor leaders say, would mean some kind of major confrontation involving the labor movement and provincial government. Industry would possibly be included.

Once the bill is fully enacted the new mediation commission can be called upon for compulsory arbitration in essential industry disputes.

While provincial Labor Minister Leslie Peterson sees the bill as the perfect formula for assisting labor and management in resolving disputes, he isn't likely to find an ally in federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

Mr. Mackasey said recently that all strikes can be considered disruptive, but that compulsory arbitration cannot be applied for that reason.

"I do not like anything that is compulsory," he said.

Groos Tries Parliament HillOwner Willing to Wait

By JACK MYERS

Destruction of Signal Hill's old brick buildings cannot be stopped by Ottawa if the planned demolition date is met by buildings—new owners, Victoria MP David Groos said Friday.

But Donald Lewis, principal of the company, said the firm will be glad to wait and see if something can be done toward "saving them."

Mr. Groos said the buildings' fate rests with their new owner, E. & D. Demolition, 1456 Gladstone. Lewis earlier announced intentions to begin demolition of the buildings Tuesday or Wednesday.

TIME ELEMENT

"Now that we know of the matter locally, we don't have time to get word to Ottawa and get any kind of action from them to save the buildings," said Mr. Groos.

"Mr. Lewis seems to be a public service-minded individual and I'm in hopes he will grant a stay of execution."

Mr. Groos heard of the sale late Thursday night and called Ottawa early Friday.

"I was unable to locate the proper people to get started on this immediately, but did dictate letters to the ministers who look after crown assets, who sold the buildings, and the national historic sites and monuments. But they cannot do anything until Tuesday since we are at a holiday weekend," he said.

WHY SURPLUS?

Mr. Groos said it is imperative interested persons and groups make public their desires to save these buildings.

Asked what he hoped to hear from Ottawa, Mr. Groos said, "I would like to have it shown to me why these buildings should have been declared surplus and sold."

He said a precedent had been established in a case where the government sold several ships and later bought them back to refit and use. "It isn't impossible that they could do the same thing with these buildings," he said.

Mr. Lewis said previously he would discuss selling the buildings complete to "anyone interested" in wanting to save them.

He said Friday night, "I'll be glad to give Mr. Groos as much time as I possibly can to get something done toward saving them."

He suggested that Mr. Groos try to get the land donated to some branch of the forces so that they could use it for a museum.

"If they go to try to move those buildings, they are in for a surprise. They are brick on concrete, cemented to solid rock. I don't think they can be moved," he said.

"I hope they can come up with some way to save them."

Municipal Leaders Dismayed

Winter Works 'Made Into Nothing' Year Earlier

By IAN STREET and DON GAIN

British Columbia municipal leaders Friday protested the axing of the federal government's winter works program but at least one engineer said the fatal blow was struck last year and Friday's announcement was just the coup de grace.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell expressed "alarm and complete wonderment" at the news.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis called it "a most short-sighted move" and Oak Bay Mayor Fred Hayes said it was "a great disappointment."

"The bulk of the damage was done last year," said Saanich municipal engineer Neville Life. "That's when they transformed it from a worthwhile project into a nothing. We used to hire about 40 or more men from welfare. Last year only a handful were hired."

Too Sharp

Mayor Curtis objected to the "sharpness" of the move. "It's not the kind of thing I had expected from this government. I had expected something more imaginative."

He said Ottawa dropped the program summarily instead of first giving notice and then presenting an alternative scheme.

"Winter works has been involved in the whole fabric of public works," he said. "It isn't spectacular but it's been a part of just about everything that's happened in Saanich from developing and building to road projects, drainage and brush clearing."

In Victoria, city manager Dennis Young said the loss will be felt, "but from the point of view of the federal and provincial governments, the winter works program as a way of stabilizing employment was a most costly and inefficient way of spending public funds."

New Method

He said he hoped the senior governments would come up with a more satisfactory method, a better approach to the problem.

Premier Bennett refused to comment on the federal action, leaving it to Mr. Campbell to say the federal decision will disrupt projects, many of which involve water and sewer programs. But, added Mr. Campbell, Ottawa should realize that decisions of this far-reaching nature should not be announced so late they leave projects in jeopardy.

"This isn't very co-operative federalism," he said.

Mr. Campbell said he couldn't understand the decision in light of the recent request by all provinces for a federal-provincial conference on the subject before any decision was made by Ottawa regarding winter works.

No Comment

The premier said he couldn't comment on the decision "because I have had no correspondence with the prime minister on this."

He also refused to say whether the provincial government, alone, would continue to give some aid to municipalities, at least for this winter.

Last winter, according to the municipal affairs department, Ottawa paid $2,500,000 toward winter works in B.C., local governments paid $2,000,000 and the provincial government put up $583,000.

The shared program last winter created 198,570 man-days of work on subsidized municipal projects in B.C., worth a total of $14,800,000.

Prior Word

Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant said the move was not unexpected. Last year the UBCM conference was told that municipalities could not expect winter works to continue indefinitely.

Cancellation was "unfortunate from a local point of view. It was of great benefit to the municipality."

Both Mayor Curtis and his engineer stressed "the great social loss."

"This was a very practical

Attendant Victim Of Change

Being helpful cost Yates Street parking lot attendant Wendy McKeown $35 when she agreed to convert change into a dollar bill at youth's request Friday night.

"He had a handful of change and asked me if I could give him a dollar for it," said Miss McKeown.

She was counting up the day's receipts when the youth made the request.

"I counted the change and gave him a dollar from the pile. Then he grabbed all the money and ran," she said.

About 25 minutes after the incident Victoria police apprehended a suspect on Wharf Street.

means of taking men off welfare rolls," the mayor said, "of giving meaningful employment and getting the job done at the same time."

Many, many municipalities will now be spending money, not on winter works, but on welfare, he said.

The workers will be getting money as welfare recipients with no work being done.

"Saanich is not alone in its plans for this year. We will now have to drop them or do them on a local taxpayer basis."

Kamloops Mayor Peter Wing, president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities expressed keen disappointment over the action.

He said the UBCM would likely vote at its forthcoming convention, to be held in Vancouver Sept. 18-20, in favor of a resolution calling on Ottawa to reconsider its decision.

Mayor Donald Morton, of North Cowichan, vice-president of the UBCM, who was in Victoria to confer with Mayor Wing and Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell on convention issues, said practically all municipalities in the province are agreed there should be a resumption of the winter works program in some form this winter.

Mayor Wing told a press conference most municipalities have made no positive winter works plans but had been assuming they would embark on a program similar to those in past years.

The amount of winter works assistance received from senior governments, said Mayor Morton often enables local authorities to complete projects where funds voted by bylaw fail to meet rising construction costs.

"At our council meeting last week we received a $20,000 cheque from winter works," he said. "It is not a lot of money. But it has enabled us last winter to build an arena just south of Chemainus and carry out a sewer plan which we will be proceeding with."

Labor Thinks About Its Future

By DON COLLINS

Organized labor in Victoria wants to know what substitute help the federal government may have in mind for the unemployed now that the winter works incentive program has been dropped.

Within hours of Prime Minister Trudeau's announcement of the move, Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of Victoria Labor Council, said:

"It is to be hoped that in drafting the speech from the Throne — and this must be underway right now — there will be definite policies to meet the problem of the unemployed in Canada."

Mr. Ryan and other labor officials are not certain that the working man was the real winner in the spending last year of $48,000,000 on winter works projects. However, they do not feel the program should be abandoned without consideration of alternative help for the unemployed.

"We just hope that he (Mr. Trudeau) is not saving money at the expense of the unemployed," Mr. Ryan said.

As a result, he promised that labor would be watching his moves from now on "very closely."

There appears little doubt that the matter will become the chief topic at next Wednesday night's meeting of the labor council.

Mr. Ryan said the challenge now facing Mr. Trudeau and his government is "basically to try to effect a high rate of economic growth to absorb the jobless on a year-round basis."

Reaction varied among spokesmen for Victoria's construction industry.

"Things aren't too good in the construction industry now," said George Farmer of Farmer Construction, an executive member of the Amalgamated Construction Association of British Columbia.

"And is this cut out it will only worsen the situation."

Another member of the same executive who isn't as worried is M.P. Paine, proprietor of the M.P. Paine Construction Co. He said it was his opinion the move "wouldn't affect the volume of work by contractors or the unemployment picture in Victoria to any great degree."

George Bevis, manager of the Canada Manpower Centre here, said he is hopeful a second winter project (sometimes confused with the incentive program) will prove successful in dealing with the employment situation.

He was referring to the Do It Now program which the Manpower department has been carrying out for some time in an effort to have work, normally be handled in spring and summer, done during the slack winter period.

This program does not involve financial incentive.

Tragedy to Families

Cutback Denies Dignity of Work

Cutting off of the federal winter works program will cause personal and family tragedies for the men who will lack employment this winter, Victoria welfare administrator Alex Davidson said Friday.

"The number of men involved isn't important. What is important is that men won't be afforded the dignity of productive work to support their families this winter."

"For that to happen to just one man is a tragedy, and anyone close will see the effect on the morale of the family."

He said the welfare department has normally started sifting through the qualifications of men on the welfare roles late in the fall to find suitable employees for municipal programs.

Convention Centre Deficits May Be Borne by Business

Many Factors Beyond Us

Rent Controls Suggested To Solve Housing Crisis

By NANCY BROWN

Governments may be forced into rent control until the housing crisis is solved, Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning suggested Friday.

She was commenting on a story of rising rents compounded by the problems of welfare problems in Friday morning's Colonist.

"I don't like subsidies, because rents can be increased at a spiralling rate if subsidies are available."

BIG PROBLEM "I don't know what to do until there are enough houses available, except to go into rent control."

Victoria city welfare administrator Alex Davidson said a large number of requests for rental overages have been received recently by the department.

"This is evidence of increasing rents for welfare people in the city," he said.

SOME DEMANDS

"There is a lack of accommodation, and people have to meet rent increases and they are passing some of the demands on to us, asking for increased grants for shelter."

Mrs. Gunning is chairman of Victoria's community housing committee formed last spring, and was chairman of Saanich welfare committee last year.

"It's hard to see what can be done under existing conditions to hold rents down," she said.

OLDER HOMES "Saanich has tried to do something by buying older houses to rent to low-income families, but that seems to be falling through because there are no suitable houses on the market."

"There are so many factors beyond our control — high land prices, and high interest costs are the main ones. I've never been in favor of rent controls, but you wonder what else can be done to keep rents at a reasonable level."

IN A PINCH "At the moment people have to pay increases if they are asked to, because they can't find alternative housing."

Mrs. Gunning said the crisis has reached such proportions that all reasonable solutions will have to be considered.

"I've never liked house trailers. I don't like the look of the exterior, but we are going to have to reconsider our objections," she said.

John Nicol, business agent for the Retail Clerks Union, and labor's representative on the housing committee, disagreed with the idea of rent controls. "They can cause chaos," he said. "A landlord isn't going to put money into a place if he knows he won't be allowed to get his money back."

"Some way would have to be found to allow him to get his investment out."

Mr. Nicol suggested the formation of a local foundation to buy older homes for a low down payment for rent to low-income families.

Eight Beat Fate

Somebody Friday locked family of eight cats in cardboard carton and dumped them on Durran Road where frightened and bewildered animals were found by Saanich poundkeeper. Temporary residence has been set up for them at SPCA shelter on Napier Road where they can be adopted in pairs or singly. —(Kinsman).

Evening Dippers Stymied By Early Bath House Lock

Some called it an act of treachery.

Others said: "We'll have their heads."

Trouble was, no one was clear about what heads should be had. They knew only that they belonged to whoever was responsible for locking the change houses at Beaver Lake before 6 p.m. Friday.

Angry would-be swimmers headed Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry off at the pass.

Ald. Newberry, who is parks committee chairman, admitted that the change houses and bath houses should be open until 9 p.m.

He tracked down Assistant Parks Supt. Lloyd Sinclair (Parks Supt. Albert Richman was out of town on holidays).

"Let's just say that it was—well, it was—well, call it an error on somebody's part," Ald. Newberry said afterward.

And, for the angry mob, including a father who "gave up drinking beer with the boys to take my 10 kids swimming," he had this assurance:

"The same mistake won't occur again."

Curators, Displayers Waging Museum Feud

By JOHN MATTERS

With the scientific and display groups challenging each other, the staff of the newly opened Provincial Museum is in turmoil, it was learned Friday.

The museum's curators — the scientific people — are reported drafting a demand that they be given the right to veto any production of the display department which they consider inaccurate or inappropriate.

Three people closely connected with the $10,000,000 centre called a Colonist reporter to a meeting Friday night to list their complaints, most of which were directed at the displays.

WHALING SCENE.

There have been undercurrents of dissent since the $80,000 Nookan whaling scene in the main foyer came under heavy criticism in June. At that time, George Moore, who was soon to resign as museum adviser, described the scene as artistically insulting and scientifically invalid.

And 10 days ago other members of the museum staff expressed their unhappiness about the "rain curtain" which pours water down a set of plastic rods at either end of the whaling scene.

WOOD DISEASES

They were afraid the moisture produced would bring to life spores of wood diseases dormant in the artifacts. The rain curtain still is in operation.

Since the building opened, it was learned Friday, its basement has been twice flooded to a depth of two inches because a pump had been turned off.

The basement is below the water table when high tide comes in Inner Harbor.

In addition, the sources said, seagulls are tearing away a new type of insulation which has been applied to the roof.

The group which called the Colonist Friday talked about displays which do not involve the observer and suggested that the lack of those qualities could be the reason for the children turning to vandalism.

CHILDREN BANNED

(Earlier this week, the museum decided children under 12 could not visit the building unless they were accompanied by a parent. They were blamed for damage to furniture and pools of urine found in dark corners.)

(The rule has since been rescinded and children under 12 now are allowed on tours escorted by a museum guide.)

The trio was disappointed that only three of the displays had moving parts and that a slide show is continually out of focus.

By DESMOND BILL

The city will likely be able to finance the proposed convention centre at the Empress Hotel without seeking taxpayer approval for the expenditure.

But a special tax levy on businesses appears to be inevitable to subsidize the centre, expected to operate at a loss.

These indications were given Friday by civic officials who are still reeling under the blast of criticism levelled at them since the proposed convention centre plan was unveiled a week ago.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said he has had lots of "feedback" on the scheme, much of it critical, but he still thinks "We have come up with the best possible proposition for the city."

He said, "I think we should go ahead. Various sections of the community have been asking for a convention centre for years and we have taken heed."

NO BEGGING But, he added, city council will not "beg the citizens to accept a convention centre."

"There are other things of equal importance, such as urban renewal and social objectives. We will not allow ourselves to become hung up on this one project."

The mayor refused to say whether he favored a plebiscite of the voters on the issue of building a convention centre with city money.

FOR DECISIONS

But Ald. Percy Frampton said, "We were elected to make decisions. There wouldn't be much sense in our going to voters and asking what they think every time a big decision has to be made. If they don't like what we do they can throw us out of office at the next election."

Ald. Hugh Ramsey, chairman of council's convention centre committee, said the figure of $2,200,000 for the centre is a rough estimate.

SOME REDUCTION

It might be possible to reduce some of the cost by making other arrangements for financing the underground parking at the centre, he said.

In any case, the final price would not be known until a design was chosen and tenders for construction actually received.

He said funds for the project would come from the following sources: $1,200,000 which is the balance of the McPherson bequest of the city; about $500,000 from the sale of the Crystal Garden; contributions from senior governments and industry; and sale of space for permanent industrial displays at the centre.

BY NOVEMBER

Mr. Ramsey said he would not consider the question of the desirability of seeking voter approval until the exact cost of the project, and the total funds available, is known, probably by early November at the latest.

Mr. Ramsey said it has been recognized all along the centre would operate at a deficit, but, he emphasized, "this deficit would be more than offset by the revenue generated in the city by convention business."

DEFICIT SEEN

He said the operating deficit of the centre, estimated by city officials to be at least $50,000 a year, could be made up by "a special levy on certain types of business or by an increase in the business tax."

Mayor Stephen said his personal opinion is that the deficit "should be picked up by the business community," although he said a hotel room tax is also a possibility.

FBI Rams Kidnapping Car Millionaire's Child Safe

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—A little boy in a blue bathing suit, two-day hostage of a kidnapper who made him a shield during a wild, shooting car chase, was reunited Friday with his wealthy parents.

FBI agents pulled Stanley Stalford Jr., 4, out of the wreckage of his abductor's car after it was deliberately rammed by an FBI car, causing a pileup at an intersection.

The boy, son of the chairman of the board of the $100,000,000 Fidelity Bank of Beverly Hills, was bruised and suffered a cut on his left knee.

EX-CONVICT

His abductor, identified by the FBI as Robert L. Dacy, 39, an ex-convict of nearby Lakewood, suffered a broken right leg and his right forehead was craved by a bullet during the 10-minute pursuit.

"I took good care of your boy," Dacy told the youngster's mother as she arrived in hospital where doctors took seven stitches in Stanley's leg. "I gave him candy and milk."

In pre-dawn darkness earlier, an intermediary for the family tried unsuccessfully to swap $250,000 in $20 bills for the boy.

The intermediary, a family friend and restaurateur Red Tracton, said he met the kidnapper and his small captive on a lonely road near a dump south of downtown Los Angeles.

Tracton said he placed the money in a bag beside the kidnapper's car, but before the man got out to pick it up he apparently became alarmed at the approach of a "Stanley car" and sped off with the boy. Tracton recovered the money.

The kidnapper led six FBI cars with 12 agents on a wild ride at 80 to 90 miles an hour at times, over highways and residential streets, through alleys and parking lots.

BOY AS SHIELD

"At all times he was trying to use the boy as a shield," said Wesley G. Grapp, agent in charge, adding that agents were told not to do anything that could endanger the boy.

A slug broke the windshield of Grapp's car and another hit the right arm of his driver, agent Emmett Doherty. Grapp then gave the order to ram Racy's car.

As an FBI car piled into Dacy's car, both careered out of control. Agents ran up to his car and grabbed his gun. It took four agents to subdue him.

"Why don't you kill me?" the suspect was quoted as saying by one of the other motorists in the wreck.

WANTS 'MOMMIE'

"I want my mommie," cried the youngster. His mother called him Stanley and gathered him in her arms. He broke into tears and uncontrolled sobbing. "I want to go home," he said.

His mother and his father took him to the airport and left town for the weekend.

Also treated for injuries was FBI agent Doherty. Two motorists passing by were injured, one seriously, as their cars hit the pileup.

The boy's mother had let the kidnapper into the posh house, believing his pose as an electrical wanting to see some equipment to help in his work at the house next door.

AWARE OF MEETING

Tracton, the family intermediary, said the FBI advised of his rendezvous with the kidnapper and where it was to take place.

He said he talked to the kidnapper by telephone "at times from 7 p.m. on" Thursday night.

"We set up places to meet. I kept the appointments, but he never showed up," Tracton said. Finally, he said, the kidnapper set the meeting place at the dump.

"I broke every traffic regulation I could think of" getting there, Tracton said, fearing he had lost contact with the FBI. A policeman stopped him and started writing a ticket.

"Get away from me," he told the officer. "Call the FBI and tell them I'm meeting the kidnapper. If you don't believe me, look in the front of my car."

SACK OF MONEY

He pointed to the sack with the money and the officer let him continue.

Tracton parked his car in the designated spot, took the money and walked about three blocks. A car drove up. He thought it was the kidnapper's, but said it contained FBI agents.

The agents drove away and seconds later, the suspect's car pulled up and stopped. Tracton said the boy was out of sight. He appeared when Tracton demanded to know whether he is alive.

By pre-arranged code with the kidnapper, Tracton asked the youngster through the window of the car the name of his dog. "Misty," came the reply.

"What was Susan's brother's name?"

RIGHT ANSWER

He said the boy gave the right answer, and Tracton dropped the money and walked away. The boy was supposed to run to him, and the kidnapper was to take the money and leave.

But nobody got out of the car immediately, and the FBI car returned. The suspect sped away.

The FBI said Dacy had served terms at a military prison at Camp Cooke, Calif., and at a federal prison at Terre Haute, Ind., and had a record of other offences.

Charges against him included violation of military code, car theft, larceny and interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle, the FBI said.

Marina's Funeral

Flags Flutter For Royalty

WINDSOR, England (UPI)—Princess Marina, the Duchess of Kent, was interred Friday beside her husband at Frogmore, the royal mausoleum in Windsor Great Park.

In accordance with the princess' last wishes, the coffin of her husband, killed in a 1942 air crash in Scotland, was moved Thursday night from the royal vault at St. George's chapel to a grave at Frogmore.

Also in accord with her final wishes, the funeral service which preceded the burial was completely private. But flags throughout Britain fluttered at half staff, while 30 members of the royal family and 20 members of foreign royal families, among them five queens, assembled in St. George's Chapel.

Princess Marina, 61, died Tuesday at Kensington Palace, her London home, of an inoperable brain tumor. Her family was at her side.

Order of the Garter

Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh sat beneath the silken banners of the Knights of the Order of the Garter.

With them were King Constantine and Queen Anne-Marie of Greece and Queen Mother Frederika, Queen Helen of Romania, ex-king Umberto of Italy, and Prince and Princess Paul of Yugoslavia. The princess is Princess Marina's sister.

The service was conducted by the dean of Windsor, Very Rev. Robin Woods. He was assisted by the successor of St. George's, Rev. Ian Collins, and Rev. Lorimer Rees, vicar of St. Mary Abbots, Kensington, where the princess worshipped. Dr. Michael Ramsay, Archbishop of Canterbury, pronounced the blessing. Archimandrite Gregory Theodoros, chancellor of the diocese of Thessaly, also attended.

The coffin, draped with the princess' royal standard and a small blue-and-white flag from Greece at the foot, was borne by non-commissioned officers from the regiments of which the princess was colonel-in-chief: the Queens, the Devon and Dorset, and the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers.

Two Coffin Wreaths

There were two wreaths on the coffin. One — from her children, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, Princess Alexandra and Prince Michael — was of red, pink, and yellow roses. The other in the Greek colors, blue and white, was from Prince and Princess Paul.

The interment in the grey stone vault at Frogmore was beside her husband, in whose honor she had maintained her country home, Coppins near Iwer in Buckinghamshire, exactly as he had left it.

Toronto Telescope

Scrapping Tragedy for Canada

TORONTO (CP)—A leading Canadian astronomer Thursday described as "a tragedy" the government's decision to scrap construction of the $22,000,000 Queen Elizabeth II Observatory in British Columbia.

"It is a tragedy for Canada's young scientists if they are to be denied scientific observational equipment comparable to that being provided by other governments for their scientists," said Dr. Donald A. MacRae, director of the David Dunlap Observatory at the University of Toronto.

The government announced Thursday the cost of the observatory, on Mount Kobau, about 150 miles east of Vancouver, cannot be justified "in this period of retrenchment and financial difficulties."

About $4,500,000 has already been spent on the observatory, including $1,500,000 for a 157-inch mirror blank built in the United States. The mirror blank, now at the University of British Columbia, was a key part of what would have been one of the most powerful telescopes in the world. The government now plans to sell it.

"Such equipment is expensive but at the same time it is being supplied in many other civilized countries," Dr. MacRae said.

Canadian Student Union

Universities Pull Out

GUELPH, Ont. (CP)—Four more universities pulled out of the Canadian Union of Students Friday, leaving only 35 in the organization.

Delegates from St. Patrick's College in Ottawa withdrew for financial reasons. The French-speaking University of Moncton, N.B., quit because it found there was no place for a French-Canadian institution in CUS.

Representatives from Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B., said they had no right to commit the university's 1,200 students to membership in the union.

FRIDAY NIGHT

They refused to sign a commitment clause which was to have been handed to the CUS executive Friday night. It would have committed the university to CUS membership and also made it responsible for any increase in per capita membership levy.

The Southern Alberta Institute of Technology pulled out earlier because it felt the current CUS administration was "completely misdirected." Delegates also opposed leftist factions which were "completely unchanged and, if anything, encouraged by the union's administration."

OTTAWA PULLOUT

The University of Ottawa withdrew its membership in the 140,000-member student group Thursday.

The walkout Friday came as the conference debated a Regina-Windsor compromise motion to redesign CUS structures.

A sixth member, College de Beburst, in New Brunswick, announced it will also withdraw. The Regina-Windsor motion would have set up the national nothing, they refuse to take any material or real values to the student movement."

St. Patrick's University withdrew for financial reasons. The decision was not made on political or ideological differences, said a St. Patrick's delegate.

"A small college has several financial restrictions at any time, but the situation is extremely severe this year because of a high deficit we inherited. This deficit is equal to half our total budget."

Hyrnas Kill Children

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Nine children have been killed by ravenous hyenas terrorizing the village of Pachperna in Uttar Pradesh state, the Press Trust of India reported Friday.

This is an increase of 2 per cent over 1967-68 school year enrolment.

The total cost of education for 1968-69 is estimated at about $6,000,000,000.

An estimated 285,387 full-time teachers will be employed at all levels of education in the new school year, an increase of 3.7 per cent.

The statistics are estimates based on expectations. Actual figures for the year will not be available for some months.

DBS said a new education system in Quebec affects comparisons with last year's figures, particularly in the numbers of students in universities and post-secondary, non-university institutions.

In 1968-69, it is expected there will be 3,959,830 pupils in the elementary grades, down 3.9 per cent from last year. Secondary school enrolment is expected to be up 15.9 per cent at 1,535,540.

students, 2.1 per cent more than last year.

Enrolment in technical institutes, community colleges, and other post-secondary, non-university institutions is expected to number 129,720, more than three times last year's figure—reflecting a change in school classification in Quebec.

Reflecting the same change, full-time enrolment in universities is expected to be down 3.3 per cent at 252,700.

Others will be enrolled in private and special schools, such as those for the blind and deaf.

Death Car Seized

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI)—Police said Friday they have found the car apparently used in the machinegun assassination of U.S. Ambassador John Gordon Mein. The car, a stolen taxi, was seized after being abandoned in a side street.

Earlier police said "many" suspects had been arrested in the Wednesday killing which the government blamed on Communist terrorists loyal to Cuban Premier Castro.

In sad procession the remains of the American diplomat were taken to church for services before being flown to the U.S.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 14-year-old girl who used to be very happy. I got tired of being called Baby Hippo and Lardie and decided to do something about it.

I went on a diet and lost 25 pounds. The weight loss has improved my looks 100 per cent and now I hate to think about the days when I was fat. So why do people keep reminding me?

Grownups who haven't seen me in a long time say, "My, but you look so much better." Or, "How much weight did you lose altogether?" It embarrasses me to death when a person ends a conversation with, "Keep up the good work," or some dumb thing like that. I intend to keep up the good work and I don't need to be told.

Please print this letter for all ex-fatties and tell people we don't want to be reminded of the past. It makes us ashamed and embarrassed.—TOUCHY GIRL.

Dear Girl: You might feel a little less touchy after reading the next letter.

And Not a Word Said

Dear Ann Landers: I used to be quite heavy. Last spring my doctor put me on a diet and I lost 22 pounds. I look 10 years younger and have more energy now than I have had in years.

Yesterday I attended a church social and saw several women I had not seen since May. Not a single person mentioned a word about my weight loss. I know they must have noticed it because I wear a size 12 now instead of a 16, and these women are not blind. Why are some folks so mean? I went to that meeting feeling like a million dollars and came home feeling like two cents — SATISFACTION DENIED.

Dear Sat.: One woman's compliment is the next woman's insult. Some days it doesn't pay to get out of bed in the morning.

Dear Ann Landers: How can parents unspoil a couple of spoiled brats. We made the mistake of listening to too many so called experts on child rearing. We let our kids express themselves to the point where now we are afraid to express OURSELVES for fear of being told off.

Is It Ever Too Late?

My husband and I are intelligent people who have gone by the book and lost our own common sense. Our children have no respect for authority. They ignore us and do as they please. They act as if the world is divided into two warring factions — parents and children.

Is it ever too late to start? If not, how do we go about getting control of kids who are out of control? Please answer this letter in the paper. I'm sure there are thousands of equally bewildered parents who would appreciate some help. — BESIDE OURSELVES.

Dear Beside: How old are the spoiled brats. Are they 3 and 5, 8 and 11, or 15 and 17? Your question is comparable to asking a physician if a disease is curable without telling him how long you've had it.

A spoiled brat, like a skin rash, is easier to get under control if you catch it in the early stages.

If your kids are 12 years of age or older you are going to need some outside help. And don't expect magic. It doesn't always work. But it's worth the try.

Outhouse Becomes 'In' Word With B.C. Order

The provincial government is selling Friday it has finally legalized pit-type outdoor privies.

A cabinet order now permits the use of outhouses of the pit type rather than those with a removable bucket, previously required under sanitary regulations passed in 1917.

A health department spokesman said the new regulations recognize the pit-type outhouse is in use in remote areas. They are also used in provincial government campsites and picnic spots.

The order also tightens regulations governing construction of outdoor privies. It specifies they must be built so flies, rats and small domestic animals can't get at the wastes, and they cannot be constructed closer than 10 feet to any dwelling and no closer than 100 feet to any lake or stream but with the approval of the medical health officer this distance can be cut to 50 feet.

However, regulations still require privies can only be built, with approval of the medical health officer, where flush toilets cannot be installed.

Council of Women Began in 1894

Local Issues the First Concern

By NANCY BROWN

When the women of Victoria — or of the world — unite, they do so through the Council of Women.

"The council was the first League of Nations," Mrs. H. I. MacKenzie, a past president of the Victoria Council of Women, said Friday.

"We had an international organization before there was a League of Nations."

"It started in Washington, D.C., 1884 with 49 delegates from eight countries."

The National Council of Women was established in 1893, and the following year saw the beginning of the Victoria branch.

"Our club is composed of delegates from about 30 local women's clubs," said the president, Mrs. W. C. Pollard, a member of the Native Daughters of B.C.

The local council is a meeting place for delegates from about 30 diversified clubs... encompassing the women's world of politics, churches, consumers and charitable organizations as well as those concerned with health, senior citizens and children.

"Perhaps one of our most important jobs is that of coordinating and passing along information on the activities of the women in this town," said Mrs. Pollard. "And of adding our weight on a local, provincial and national level where necessary."

"At our first meeting in September we shall hear from Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning and the municipal engineer Neville Life on the reasons for the Sept. 28 sewer consolidation vote in the municipality."

Over the years the council, working through its provincial and national organizations, has contributed to Canadian progress.

The achievements ranged from the founding of the Victorian Order of Nurses under the leadership of the first president Lady Aberdeen, to the cleaning up of canneries where women and children were employed.

Many laws for the protection of women and children had their start at the insistence of the council. They included the franchise for women and the right to sit in the Senate and decent treatment for the aged poor and mentally deficient children.

For years the council battled to create medical inspection in schools, safe water and milk supplies and departments of public health. "We were happy to see liberalized divorce laws this year," said Mrs. Pollard. "We've sent resolution after resolution for years to bring the plight of some married people to the attention of the government."

In Victoria some clubs, created through the council have almost outgrown the parent organization. One of these clubs is the Association of Women Electors, which sends Mrs. MacKenzie as one of its delegates to the council.

"This was started when the Business and Professional Women's Club suggested a committee on municipal affairs. We felt the job was too big for a committee, and now we have the A.W.E. which is growing in size and influence."

Come On, Hippy Dolls Trim Off Those Bulges

By MARY SUE MILLER

The "in" skirt for fall falls out from the waist via gathers, godet insets, pleated flares and bias flares. You might think that the fullness would set like a blessing in disguise for the heavy hip. But it's not so.

Just put twin teens in the same full-skirted dress and they lose their twinship. If one has a hip problem, you can tell which one has it, too.

So come on, hippy dolls, trim off those bulges before the guessing game begins. Like so...

Starting Position: Stretch out, back down on the floor; bend elbows and rest backs of hands on floor, about four inches from shoulders. Straighten legs and knees; keep knees straight and shoulders pressed to floor throughout.

Action: Slide left leg sideways with right leg. Continue moving legs at 10 inch intervals until they are at right angles to the body. To reach position, roll gradually onto left buttock. Position accomplished, very quickly swing back to starting position with legs about one inch off floor.

ERMA BOMBECK Shops

Cheap at Half Price

Men are predictable. Especially the cheap ones. Every time there is an increase in the cost of living, I can depend upon my husband to say, "If this keeps up, I'll be selling apples on Main Street." This is followed by an inquiry that makes Ghengis Khan look like television's Tiny Tim.

"How often do you go to the store?" he charges. "Every three hours." "That's ridiculous!" he snorts. "What do you do with all that food?"

"I save it in the refrigerator until it decays. Then I make pemmican out of it." "Don't be a smart-mouth. The trouble with housewives is they pay an outrageous price for convenience. They buy every packaged deal on the market. Do they think to buy in season? Or in great quantities? They do not. You tell me what you spend for food in a week and I'll go to the supermarket and spend half of what you spend."

He did it, of course. "You see," he said waving the cash register tape before my eyes, "it's shrewd buying. Before you purchase something you ask yourself three questions: Do I need it? Can I afford it? Can I live without it? It's that simple."

The first item I pulled out of the bag was a plastic cover for a dog food can that glowed in the dark. Next, came a package of legal-sized envelopes, a can of car wax and a six-pack of breath mints. "The food is in the next bag," he said. "I got quite a lay on four heads of cauliflower."

"CAULIFLOWER! We all hate cauliflower. You said yourself they always reminded you of a diseased gall bladder."

"And here's a special on a 20-pound bag of bird seed (which made all of us want to get a bird), a two-gallon denton can of pancake syrup and a jug of Polish peppers."

"And look at this," he said proudly. "You'd be surprised at the people who passed up this special on chicken necks."

"No I wouldn't," I said, tired.

At the bottom of the bag was a set of pen refills, a bag of charcoal, a sports magazine and a bug candle.

"You put the stuff away," I said. "And I'll run down and pick up a few things for lunch."

He slumped into a chair, his head in his hands. "I'll be selling pencils on Main Street," he moaned. "What happened to the apples?" "They went up 22 per cent this month," he sighed.

Voice Wires Embassy Over Czech Intrusion

The Voice of Women Friday deplored Russia's military intervention in Czechoslovakia, in a telegram sent to the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa. Similar messages were sent by branches and individual members, said B.C. president Deano Birmingham. The Voice of Women said members are astounded by the Russian action, and added the Soviet representative to the Security Council had contributed no convincing arguments in support of sending Soviet and other foreign troops into Czechoslovakia.

Outfall Clouds Suspected Sickness Carriers

By JOHN MATTERS

Scientists have found possibly disease-laden clouds of fecal particles hovering over Greater Victoria's offshore sewage outfalls, it was learned Friday.

The startling discovery was made this summer by a team led by Dr. S. J. Webb of the bacteriology department of the University of Saskatchewan's medical college.

The fecal material taken in samples 2,500 and 5,000 feet above the outfalls contained microbial flora. Wherever such flora are found, the strong possibility exists that disease-causing organisms also are present.

In addition to entering the body via the respiratory passages, such particles would spread over the city and countryside, falling eventually onto plants, berries and pastureland, where they are consumed by humans and animals.

Dr. Webb also measured the fecal clouds over the South Saskatchewan River, into which the city of Saskatoon dumps its sewage. He found that they were similar to those over Victoria's outfalls.

Samples from altitudes above a raw sewage outlet at Victoria revealed the same types of fecal particles as were found at Saskatoon. The fact one outlet was to salt and the other to fresh water made no difference.

The particles tend to remain in cloudlike formations above the outlets at Victoria and Saskatoon on quiet, comparatively windless days.

However, even a mild air movement can carry them 10 miles or more.

Vegetables and fruit could be washed but ordinary water would be unlikely to ensure purity. The air breathed by the population of an entire city would be beyond the realm of complete sterilization.

Saskatoon for years has had a history of heavy infections in winter from what is popularly called stomach flu.

Dr. Webb is wondering if much of this may not be due to the fecal content of the air.

The results of the study, which Dr. Webb expects will not be published in a scientific journal for several months, come at a time when both Victoria and Saskatoon are considering improvements to their sewage disposal systems.

Most of Greater Victoria's sewage — about 6,000,000 gallons a day — pours into the sea off Cattle Point and Finnelly Cove.

The metropolitan sewage study prepared two years ago suggests eight more outfalls be added to the sea disposal system.

However, the sewage-into-the-sea notion has been under heavy fire here in the past 10 months.

Bank Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor Louis Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada announced Friday night a cut in the bank rate to 6 per cent from 6½ per cent, effective Sept. 3.

His brief announcement said the cut was "in line with recent developments in Canada and abroad."

The bank rate is the rate of interest charged by the Bank of Canada on loans to the chartered banks. They rarely draw such advances, and then only for short periods, but the central bank stands ready to make the advances as so-called lender of last resort in the banking system.

FINANCIAL SIGN

By the bank rate it sets, the Bank of Canada gives a signal to the financial community about its view of the credit situation.

When the central bank was trying to dampen down an overheated economy last year it pushed the rate to 6 per cent in November, and to 7 per cent in January this year.

The rate was pushed up to its peak of 7½ per cent March 15 — the day the London gold market was closed in the crisis over gold.

FREE PRICE

A free market price for gold was then established by international bankers, letting it ride higher than the $35 an ounce U.S. price still used for international monetary purposes.

The Bank of Canada reduced the bank rate to 7 per cent July 2 after more ease was permitted in the money markets and short-term interest rates began to fall. It was cut further to 6½ per cent on July 29.

Pravda Urges 'Liquidation' Of 40,000

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda today called for "liquidation" of 40,000 counter-revolutionaries in Czechoslovakia.

As quoted by Tass, the organ of the Communist party said the struggle in Czechoslovakia is far from over.

"Having failed in the capital and industrial centres, the reactionaries go to the provinces," the newspaper said in an article from S. Borzenko, its Prague correspondent.

"Counter-revolution is manoeuvring. Whatever is honest in the Czechoslovak people calls for the liquidation, in the first turn, of counter-revolutionary gangs which number over 40,000 members.

Czech List Of 2,000 Told 'Go'

From Reuters, AP, UPI

PRAGUE — Premier Oldrich Cernik of Czechoslovakia has warned that the Soviet Union has drawn up a list of more than 2,000 Czechoslovak intellectuals who may be arrested.

His warning, which leaked out Friday, came as evidence mounted that Soviet patience with the stubborn non-cooperation of the Czechoslovaks is running short.

Moscow signalled a housecleaning of key liberals with a press attack calling for the ouster in Prague of "bankrupt politicians" and "those who have succumbed to nationalistic sentiments."

Price of Withdrawal

Communist sources in Prague said Soviet occupation authorities demanded the re-instatement of pro-Moscow hardliners as the price of first troop withdrawals.

In Vienna, the state-operated radio station reported that Czech interior minister Josef Pavel, who's department runs the police, has resigned.

The Soviet press lambasted Deputy Premier Ota Sik, father of the Czechoslovak economic reform. Sik was vacationing in Yugoslavia at the time of the invasion and so far has not returned. Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek, also believed to be in either Vienna or Belgrade, stalling off his return to Czechoslovakia from the United Nations.

In other developments: Reuters news agency reported it had been authorized to learn that the Czechoslovak Communist party central committee — the country's supreme policy-making body — would meet today to elect a new ruling presidium.

The country's communist leaders were reported preparing to debate, at a party congress, the accord reached in Moscow negotiations, which provided for gradual withdrawal of Soviet troops from Czechoslovakia as the situation "normalizes."

The Associated Press reported that Soviet tanks and occupation troops moved out of Prague Friday, but Soviet security agents moved behind the scenes to tighten Moscow's grip on the country.

Reuters reported, however, that the Soviets were ignoring Czechoslovak demands to withdraw from key points of the city where their presence was preventing a return to normal life. Cernik's government was reported virtually powerless

Winter Works Death 'Unjust and Bizarre'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced cancellation of the government's winter works program Friday and said there will be more "drastic cuts" in "many areas" of public expenditure.

The objective, he told a news conference, is better use of public funds. The planned cuts were not "sham." They would force cabinet ministers to come up with more productive programs.

Opposition Leader Stansfield promptly denounced cancellation of the program as "unjust and unjustified."

He said it is impossible to understand "the bizarre process of reasoning" that led Trudeau to conclude, at a time of heavy unemployment, that the program is unnecessary.

The winter works program, initiated in 1958-59 by a Conservative government, involved a federal expenditure of roughly $30,000,000 annually over the last 10 years. The federal government paid half the on-site labor costs for approved capital projects undertaken by municipalities in winter. It covered such construction as sidewalks, sewers, bridges, municipal buildings and parks.

The cost to the federal government last winter was about $25,000,000, down from the peak of $40,900,000 in 1965-66.

Last winter, there were 3,800 approved projects in 1,700 municipalities. A total of 88,000 men were hired and about 3,000,000 man-days of work were provided. All provinces participated.

Michael Starr, who launched the program as labor minister in the Diefenbaker administration, reacted mildly to the announcement.

Interviewed by telephone at his home in Oshawa, Ont., he said: "It was a good program and it served its purpose, but if the government in its wisdom sees there is no further need for it, that is their decision."

The prime minister also announced;

Tension Rising Again

From Wire Reports

BUCHAREST — Tension in Romania, which decreased after the announcement of the Moscow agreement with Czechoslovakia, has started to mount again with reports of Russian and Bulgarian troops concentrating along Romania's eastern and southern border.

Many well informed Romanians say the weekend could be critical, and Bucharest has an atmosphere of crisis, the London Daily Telegraph reports.

Travellers returning from the Soviet Ukraine reported long columns of armor and artillery near the Pruth River, which forms the Rumanian-Soviet border in the east.

DANUBE PORT

Bulgarian troops were said to be moving into the area of Russe, opposite the Rumanian Danube River port of Giurgiu, where a huge bridge connects the two countries.

People arriving at the Rumanian border crossing point of Albota reported a concentration of Russian tanks, personnel carriers and guns near the Ukrainian town of Kobovskoye. Roads to the border were clogged with troops heading west, one traveller said.

IN DIVISIONS

Estimates of Russian troops strength in the area range from 15 to 27 divisions of armor and motorized infantry.

Also adding to the unease in the continued distribution of arms in factories and offices to national guard members. They

'Let No One Unleash Dogs of War'

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson said Friday night there are rumors the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia might be repeated elsewhere in Eastern Europe and asserted "let no one unleash the dogs of war."

Johnson warned any would-be aggressor not to misjudge the United States and said that there will be no appeasement of those who prowl across national boundaries "in this or any other administration."

The rumors centred on Romania and came through official channels rather than from news reports from overseas.

Extra Week Urged For Youth Camp

NANAIMO — Although this year's children's camp at Shawigan Lake was successful, chairman Maden Zorkin of Nanaimo believes that it should be extended for an additional week.

The Vancouver Island camp for emotionally disturbed children closed this week. Twenty-four children attended the camp where specialized teachers taught programs which included recreational activities, indoor education class and other courses designed to help the children to understand themselves better.

Cost of this year's camp was $7,000 which was raised from parents' contributions and donations from individuals and organizations.

NEXT YEAR
Mr. Zorkin said Thursday that an estimated $1,400 surplus will be applied to next year's camp. Nanaimo Seraxmen Club have already contributed $300 for next year.

"We must soon decide whether our efforts remain an experiment or become a permanent project," said Mr. Zorkin.

"The counsellors discovered this year that the biggest improvement in the children's condition takes place in the last three or four days. Perhaps another week would make a tremendous difference."

However, it would cost at least another $2,500 according to present estimates, he said.

"EXCELLENT PROGRESS"

"We want to encourage anyone who wants to help children in our society — right here on Vancouver Island — to get involved in our project."

Dr. Sven Jensen, Nanaimo Health Centre psychiatrist, said the youngsters made excellent progress at the camp despite wet weather.

A meeting will be held in October with the parents to assess the benefits.

Officials will also obtain reports from teachers, who will have the children in their classes this fall, to see how well the children adjust to the new school term.

FINAL ASSESSMENT

Mr. Zorkin said a final assessment of the camp will be known in November.

He is firmly convinced of the camp's benefits.

"I believe that our whole social welfare system in taking the child away from the parents, is wrong. The best way to treat children, according to our specialist, is to keep them in the family environment with parents who from the start know more about the children's problems."

Shoe Made for Riding

Old Lady in Shoe entry in Gold River Days parade at weekend was provided by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dryden who have six children aged five to 13. It took them week to make with help of teenagers Annette Wallberg, Keith Donovan and neighbor Mrs. Laila Axen. Dryden children inside shoe were Mary (old lady), Mark, Michael, Marlene, and Myra. Peggy Dryden was outside. Also with float were Gustav Axen, Irene and Jerry Edgecome, Patricia Kehoe and Cindy Kelly. Dog Pippy stole show with peep through window but he would only stay there if children provided candy. — (Pat Costello)

"Satisfactory"

Three Injured

CAMPBELL RIVER — Three men were injured this week in a single-car accident on the Island Highway, three miles north of Roberts Lake.

They are Andrew Coon of Gullford Island, Bernard Smith of Rivers Inlet and Alfred Scow of Alert Bay.

Police say that the car in which the three were travelling apparently missed a curb and ran over a 15-foot embankment. The three men are said to be in satisfactory condition.

Ucluelet Streets

Paving Program Going Ahead

UCLUELET — Streets in Ucluelet are being prepared for paving.

Trucks have been taking crushed materials to the area from the highways department plant and paving is expected to start within days, provided the good weather continues.

Storm drains have been installed on many streets and culverts. Although heavy rain has delayed the work, excavating and draining has progressed fairly well.

In Tofino, tenders have been called for the removal of a log culvert on First Street and installation of a four-foot steel culvert which will be supplied by the village. The deadline is Wednesday.

The provincial parks board has posted signs warning swimmers of a dangerous undertow off rocks at Green Point, near the Long Beach campsite.

The action follows reports of a number of near-drownings.

Robert Hais has taken over management of the Ucluelet branch of the Alberni Credit Union. He was formerly in charge of the Gold River branch.

Mr. and Mrs. Early Boyd have moved from Burnaby to take over the Zailo Apartments, Ucluelet, which they bought from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zailo. The block has been renamed the Boyd Apartments.

Boats Setting Sail For Club's Two-Day Regatta

DUNCAN — A total of 200 sail boats will line up today for races during the annual Maple Bay Yacht Club Labor Day regatta.

The two-day event will end Sunday with a 15-mile long distance race to Tent Island. The winner of the handicap race will receive the George Peakes trophy.

Other trophies will be presented Sunday afternoon by Hunter Vogel, honorary member of the club.

Regatta chairman Mike Stone said one of the highlights this year will be the dragon race with an anticipated participation of 10 craft.

One of the dragon crews, Skipper Steven Tupper of Vancouver, Tom Irwin of Maple Bay and David Miller of Vancouver, will represent Canada during the October Olympics in Mexico.

Two Bandits Grab $15,000

PORT MCNEILL—RCMP were searching Friday for two men who robbed a Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce courier of $15,000.

Police said the bank teller was taking a payroll from here to a logging camp 15 miles away when the holdup men flagged his car, forced him out of the vehicle and tied him to a tree.

They then took the loot, which was to meet a month-end payroll, and fled. No arrests have been made.

Two Mayors Warn

Winter Works Death Will Cause Delays

Disappointment over the federal government's decision to cancel its winter works program was expressed Friday by Mayor Fred Bishop of Port Alberni and Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo.

Mayor Bishop said the decision to eliminate federal help would severely cut back certain works which had been planned by the city on the basis of previous participation.

During recent years most of the parks beautification and beauty spots that have been created out of previously neglected areas of rough land have been carried out under the program.

"We always tried to find projects that took a minimum amount of material and provided a maximum amount of work for men, many of whom might otherwise be on welfare," he said.

'GOOD SHAPE'

He added that while as a taxpayer he appreciated the federal government's desire to cut expenses, he also felt it was necessary to keep residents off the welfare rolls wherever possible.

In Nanaimo Mayor Ney said the decision would delay the city's boulevard and park improvement programs.

"We are naturally disappointed with the government's announcement," but fortunately Nanaimo is in good financial shape," he said.

"We have a big civic improvement program scheduled for this winter and projects such as beautification of the promenade, benches, greenery, and planters for the main street will be held back.

"The most unfortunate effect will be on people on social welfare and unemployment insurance who prefer to work and have done so in past winters under winter works programs. This is the tragic part of the whole idea.

"It would have been very nice to have had double assistance of winter works, but I believe today's move is something the federal government has been forced to do," said Mayor Ney.

INTEREST DOWN

"On the other hand, capital expenditures in Canada are up this year, interest rates are going down, we have a buoyant economy, and some people even say we're experiencing a mini-boom."

Mayor Ney said he would recommend to city council that sidewalk programs be expanded to absorb some of those who would be out of work as result of the decision.

Ald. Gertrude Hall, chairman of the winter works program, said the government's decision "is certainly going to affect our boulevard and promenade work. I'm very disturbed at the latest news regarding the cessation of the winter works program. We had quite an effective program lined up for this winter."

"However I do believe, that while this is going to curtail us in many ways, it is not going to be disastrous to the city economy or to our progress."

City clerk Howard Nicholson says Nanaimo had not yet reached the point of submitting a specific program for this winter.

He said the city had completed $2,260,500 worth of work since the winter works program started in 1958.

Since that time, said Mr. Nicholson Nanaimo has recovered $523,000 in federal funds, and $371,000 from the province.

PRIME MEANS

Mr. Nicholson said winter works was a prime means of getting the unemployed back into a productive society.

"You can't put a dollar sign on that," he said.

Dr. McDiarmid also expressed his disappointment that "one of the truly worthwhile federal policies" had been cancelled.

During his time on Totino council, he said, he became aware how many projects smaller municipalities had been able to undertake because the help afforded by the winter works program.

STRICTER RULES

He also said that he was aware that there might have been misuse of funds in some instances reported from eastern Canada but both he and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell had urged a tightening of regulations rather than elimination of the grant.

"Both Dan Campbell and I pressed the federal government to continue the winter program but apparently without avail," said Dr. McDiarmid.

Chemainus Harbor

Bid for Breakwater Gaining in Support

By KLAUS MUENTER

CHEMAINUS — An attempt by Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce to have a breakwater built at Chemainus harbor is gaining solid support from many areas.

Backing has come from residents, clubs, industry, merchants, sailing enthusiasts, airlines and North Cowichan municipality.

A detailed brief supporting the proposal has been sent to Public Works Minister Arthur Laing, and Transport Minister Paul Hellyer.

Chemainus has been trying to have a breakwater built for 20 years and now the chamber has picked up the ball and prepared a brief with professional help.

In an accompanying letter to Mr. Laing, president Mrs. Betty Deacon wrote: "The need for a breakwater was taken up with the department of public works a number of years ago, culminating in a letter dated April 25, 1962, from deputy minister H. A. Young, in which he stated it was felt that the proposal should be left in abeyance for the present."

Mrs. Deacon also told Mr. Laing that the volume of traffic using the harbor has now increased to such an extent that a breakwater has become essential for the sake of marine safety.

Mrs. Deacon said Friday that the chamber is pressing for a breakwater not only to accommodate small boats, but also because of commercial shipping "which is Chemainus' life-line."

"With the increase in the size of ships, Chemainus harbor facilities are very crowded. We only utilize half of our harbor and with the newly proposed breakwater we would be able to use the entire area. Our harbor is one of the oldest. It has been used for over 100 years for the shipping of logs and lumber and we just cannot stand by and see the harbor go down. We shall do everything in our power to improve the facilities."

It would start at the foot of Maple Street, with a rock-filled dam extending about 650 feet into the water, and ending at Hospital Rock.

The large structure would accommodate a boat launching ramp, a marina, government wharf, shops facilities, a marine gas station and future marine ways and boat repair facilities. Chemainus harbor master R. B. Guibride, who helped to prepare the brief, said: "We have been trying for a breakwater in Chemainus for at least 20 years. Each summer I have seen many pleasure craft leave Chemainus because there are no berths or else the sea was too rough to land safely."

"Chemainus was proclaimed a public harbor on March 2, 1897, but in all these years very little has been spent towards improving it. Chemainus has provided a considerable amount of revenue from harbor dues in all these years and also provided quite considerably towards the gross national output and provided jobs for a good many Canadians."

Various yacht clubs stressed the necessity for a breakwater. Some comments were:

• Chemainus Harbor should have a breakwater because Chemainus would be an ideal refuge from bad weather.—Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

• The improvement of shelter facilities for small craft from sudden and violent weather changes would help considerably to reduce the rate of air-sea rescue incident.—Esquimalt Squadron, Royal Canadian Naval Sailing Association.

• Any improvement by way of protection for small craft would certainly be beneficial to your community and welcomed by the cruising public.—West Vancouver Yacht Club.

• We feel it would be an interesting harbor in which to stay a day or two. However, because of the limited dock space, we have never done so.—Portland Yacht Club.

Mandool II

Ship Saved For Scrap

VANCOUVER (CP)—A salvage expert says the wrecked tanker Mandool II is to be patched and "stitched" with cable so it can be towed to Formosa for scrapping by a Japanese company.

Bill Kennedy, joint owner of the tanker with Mitsui Co., said a 100-foot hole in the vessel's side will be patched with deck plates and a deck gap stitched with chain and cable.

The vessel lies in Nootka Sound on the west coast of Vancouver Island. It was towed there after a collision Feb. 28 with a Japanese freighter, 300 miles west of Seattle. Eleven people died.

Mr. Kennedy said repair work—either in Nootka Sound or in drydock near Victoria—is to start in about 10 days and is expected to take two weeks.

"We plan to cannibalize the ship for masts, spars and steelwork to span the 100-foot-wide hole in her side. Then we will use deck plates to weld on a new side."

Labor Thinks About Its Future

By DON COLLINS

Organized labor in Victoria wants to know what substitute help the federal government may have in mind for the unemployed now that the winter works incentive program has been dropped.

Within hours of Prime Minister Trudeau's announcement of the move, Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of Victoria Labor Council, said:

"It is to be hoped that in drafting the speech from the Throne — and this must be underway right now — there will be definite policies to meet the problem of the unemployed in Canada."

Mr. Ryan and other labor officials are not certain that the working man was the real winner in the spending last year of $48,000,000 on winter works projects. However, they do not feel the program should be abandoned without consideration of alternative help for the unemployed.

"We just hope that he (Mr. Trudeau) is not saving money at the expense of the unemployed," Mr. Ryan said.

As a result, he promised that labor would be watching his moves from now on "very closely."

There appears little doubt that the matter will become the chief topic at next Wednesday night's meeting of the labor council.

Mr. Ryan said the challenge now facing Mr. Trudeau and his government is "basically to try to effect a high rate of economic growth to absorb the jobs on a year-round basis."

Reaction varied among spokesmen for Victoria's construction industry.

"Things aren't too good in the construction industry now," said George Farmer of Farmer Construction, an executive member of the Amalgamated Construction Association of British Columbia.

"And is this cut out it will only worsen the situation."

Another member of the same executive who isn't as worried is M.P. Paine, proprietor of the M.P. Paine Construction Co.

He said it was his opinion the move "wouldn't affect the volume of work by contractors or the unemployment picture in Victoria to any great degree."

George Bevis, manager of the Canada Manpower Centre here, said he is hopeful a second winter project (sometimes confused with the incentive program) will prove successful in dealing with the employment situation.

He was referring to the Do It Now program which the Manpower department has been carrying out for some time in an effort to have work, normally be handled in spring and summer, done during the slack winter period.

This program does not involve financial incentive,

Queen Sends Telegram For Diamond Wedding

PARKSVILLE — Congratulatory messages have been flooding in for Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Marks of Parksville who celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary this week.

They included telegrams from Queen Elizabeth and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, a scroll from Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson, a letter from Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Mrs. Bennett and a telegram from MLA Dr. Howard McDiarmid.

Mr. and Mrs. Marks were married at St. Mary's parish church, Shawley, Worcestershire, by Rev. William Vernon who had baptized Mr. Marks as a baby.

Mrs. Marks, who was formerly Edith Breakwell, was born in the neighboring county of Shropshire. She met her husband before he left with the Worcestershire Yeomanry to fight in the Boer War.

After the war, Mr. Marks visited Canada and then re-

In 1911, Mr. and Mrs. Marks left England to visit his brother in Colorado. Later they came to Vancouver Island and settled at Nanaimo Bay where Mr. Marks' elder brother operated a sawmill.

Old friends of the family Mr. and Mrs. James Haworth of Parksville were among those present.

A special anniversary cake had been decorated by Mrs. Velda Foster of Parksville.

Visitors came from Port Alberni, Victoria, Vancouver and Montreal.

Bank Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor Louis Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada announced Friday night a cut in the bank rate to 6 per cent from 6½ per cent, effective Sept. 3.

His brief announcement said the cut was "in line with recent developments in Canada and abroad."

The bank rate is the rate of interest charged by the Bank of Canada on loans to the chartered banks. They rarely draw such advances, and then only for short periods, but the central bank stands ready to make the advances as so-called lender of last resort in the banking system.

FINANCIAL SIGN

By the bank rate it sets, the Bank of Canada gives a signal to the financial community about its view of the credit situation.

When the central bank was trying to dampen down an overheated economy last year it pushed the rate to 6 per cent in November, and to 7 per cent in January this year.

The rate was pushed up to its peak of 7½ per cent March 15—the day the London gold market was closed in the crisis over gold.

FREE PRICE

A free market price for gold was then established by international bankers, letting it ride higher than the $35 an ounce U.S. price still used for international monetary purposes.

The Bank of Canada reduced the bank rate to 7 per cent July 2 after more ease was permitted in the money markets and short-term interest rates began to fall. It was cut further to 6½ per cent on July 29.

Pravda Urges 'Liquidation' Of 40,000

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda today called for "liquidation" of 40,000 counter-revolutionaries in Czechoslovakia.

As quoted by Tass, the organ of the Communist party said the struggle in Czechoslovakia is far from over.

"Having failed in the capital and industrial centres, the reactionaries go to the provinces," the newspaper said in an article from S. Borzenko, its Prague correspondent.

"Counter-revolution is manoeuvring. Whatever is honest in the Czechoslovak people calls for the liquidation, in the first turn, of counter-revolutionary gangs which number over 40,000 members."

Army, Rebels Battle In Congo Republic

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo Republic (UPI) — Army troops Friday battled rebel forces lay down their weapons. A 7 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew was ordered. Fighting was reported to have broken out when rebel forces opened fire on army troops sent to an area south of Brazzaville. Radio Brazzaville broadcast appeals for all doctors and nurses to report immediately to Central Hospital. Requests for blood donors were broadcast every 10 minutes. SOVIET TROOPS MASS AT ROMANIA BORDER

Czech List Of 2,000 Told 'Go'

From Reuters, AP, UPI

PRAGUE—Premier Oldrich Cernik of Czechoslovakia has warned that the Soviet Union has drawn up a list of more than 2,000 Czechoslovak intellectuals who may be arrested.

His warning, which leaked out Friday, came as evidence mounted that Soviet patience with the stubborn non-collaboration of the Czechoslovaks is running short.

Moscow signalled a housecleaning of key liberals with a press attack calling for the ouster in Prague of "bankrupt politicians" and "those who have succumbed to nationalistic sentiments."

Price of Withdrawal

Communist sources in Prague said Soviet occupation authorities demanded the re-instatement of pro-Moscow hardliners as the price of first troop withdrawals.

In Vienna, the state-operated radio station reported that Czech interior minister Josef Pavel, who's department runs the police, has resigned.

The Soviet press lambasted Deputy Premier Ota Sik, father of the Czechoslovak economic reform. Sik was vacationing in Yugoslavia at the time of the invasion and so far has not returned. Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek, also is believed to be in either Vienna or Belgrade, stalling off his return to Czechoslovakia from the United Nations.

In other developments: Reuters news agency reported it had been authorized to learn that the Czechoslovak Communist party central committee — the country's supreme policy-making body — would meet today to elect a new ruling presidium.

The country's communist leaders were reported preparing to debate, at a party congress, the accord reached in Moscow negotiations, which provided for gradual withdrawal of Soviet bloc troops from Czechoslovakia as the situation "normalizes."

The Associated Press reported that Soviet tanks and occupation troops moved out of Prague Friday, but Soviet security agents moved behind the scenes to tighten Moscow's grip on the country. Reuters reported however, that the Soviets were ignoring Czechoslovak demands to withdraw from key points of the city where their presence was preventing a return to normal life. Cernik's government was reported virtually powerless against Soviet moves to place experts in key centres and organizations throughout the country, despite a Soviet promise at the Moscow meeting not to do so.

Tension Rising Again

From Wire Reports

BUCHAREST — Tension in Romania, which decreased after the announcement of the Moscow agreement with Czechoslovakia, has started to mount again with reports of Russian and Bulgarian troops concentrating along Romania's eastern and southern border.

Many well informed Romanians say the weekend could be critical, and Bucharest has an atmosphere of crisis, the London Daily Telegraph reports.

Travellers returning from the Soviet Ukraine reported long columns of armor and artillery near the Pruth River, which forms the Rumanian-Soviet border in the east.

DANUBE PORT

Bulgarian troops were said to be moving into the area of Russe, opposite the Romanian Danube River port of Giurgiu, where a huge bridge connects the two countries.

People arriving at the Romanian border crossing point of Albita reported a concentration of Russian tanks, personnel carriers and guns near the Ukrainian town of Kotovskoj. Roads to the border were clogged with troops heading west, one traveller said.

IN DIVISIONS

Estimates of Russian troops strength in the area range from 15 to 27 divisions of armor and motorized infantry.

Also adding to the unease in the continued distribution of arms in factories and offices to national guard members. They

Winter Works Death 'Unjust and Bizarre'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced cancellation of the government's winter works program Friday and said there will be more "drastic cuts" in "many areas" of public expenditure.

The objective, he told a news conference, is better use of public funds. The planned cuts were not "sham." They would force cabinet ministers to come up with more productive programs.

Opposition Leader Stanfield promptly denounced cancellation of the program as "unjust and unjustified."

He said it is impossible to understand "the bizarre process of reasoning" that led Trudeau to conclude, at a time of heavy unemployment, that the program is unnecessary.

The winter works program, initiated in 1958-59 by a Conservative government, involved a federal expenditure of roughly $30,000,000 annually over the last 10 years.

The federal government paid half the on-site labor costs for approved capital projects undertaken by municipalities in winter. It covered such construction as sidewalks, sewers, bridges, municipal buildings and parks.

The cost to the federal government last winter was about $25,000,000, down from the peak of $40,900,000 in 1965-66.

Formation of a five-man committee to study and report, by March 1 at the latest, on government information services at home and abroad. The committee would make recommendations "to promote greater efficiency in the diffusion of official information."

Appointment of 16 parliamentary secretaries to cabinet ministers. James Walker, 57, Liberal MP for York Centre, will be Trudeau's parliamentary secretary. He played a major role in the prime minister's successful campaign for the Liberal leadership.

Canadian immigration doors will be opened as wide as possible for any Czechoslovak intellectuals seeking refuge in this country.

The Czech situation has a bearing on the cabinet's current reassessment of Canada's role in NATO.

'Let No One Unleash Dogs of War'

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson said Friday night there are rumors the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia might be repeated elsewhere in Eastern Europe and asserted "let no one unleash the dogs of war."

Johnson warned any would-be aggressor not to misjudge the United States and said that there will be no appeasement of those who prowl across national boundaries "in this or any other administration." The rumors centered on Romania and came through official channels rather than from news reports from overseas.

Theory Links Water, Wind, Microbes

Outfall Clouds Suspected Sickness Carrier

By JOHN MATTERS

Scientists have found possibly disease-laden clouds of fecal particles hovering over Greater Victoria's offshore sewage outfalls, it was learned Friday.

The startling discovery was made this summer by a team led by Dr. S. J. N. Webb of the bacteriology department of the University of Saskatchewan's medical college.

The fecal material taken in samples 2,500 and 5,000 feet above the outfalls contained microbial flora. Wherever such flora are found, the strong possibility exists that disease-causing organisms also are present.

In addition to entering the body via the respiratory passages, such particles would spread over the city and countryside, falling eventually onto plants, berries and pastureland, where they are consumed by humans and animals.

Dr. Webb also measured the fecal clouds over the South Saskatchewan River, into which the city of Saskatoon dumps its sewage. He found that they were similar to those over Victoria's outfalls.

Samples from altitudes above a raw sewage outlet at Victoria revealed the same types of fecal particles as were found at Saskatoon. The fact one outlet was to salt and the other to fresh water made no difference.

The particles tend to remain in cloudlike formations above the outlets at Victoria and Saskatoon on quiet, comparatively windless days. However, even a mild air movement can carry them 10 miles or more.

Vegetables and fruit could be washed but ordinary water would be unlikely to ensure purity. The air breathed by the population of an entire city would be beyond the realm of complete sterilization.

Saskatoon for years has had a history of heavy infections in winter from what is popularly called stomach flu.

Dr. Webb is wondering if much of this may not be due to the fecal content of the air.

The results of the study, which Dr. Webb expects will not be published in a scientific journal for several months, come at a time when both Victoria and Saskatoon are considering improvements to their sewage disposal systems. Most of Greater Victoria's sewage — about 6,000,000 gallons a day — pours into the sea off Cattle Point and Finnetry Cove.

The metropolitan sewage study prepared two years ago suggests eight more outfalls be added to the sea disposal system.

However, the sewage-into-the-sea notion has been under heavy fire here in the past 10 months. Continued on Page 3
